REVERE OFFICIALS CLASH IN TOWN HALL

PROTEST RECKLESS AUTOISTS

Sane motorists in Greater Boston and throughout the State united today in the demand that auto speed maniacs and motorists guilty of any other form of recklessness be given real penalties in order that Massachusetts highways might be made and kept safe for pedestrians and all forms of vehicle traffic.

The sane motorists stand ready to help in a crusade to this end, Lewis R. Speare, president of the Massachusetts State Automobile Association and past president of the American Automobile Association, declared today. He said:

We owe it to ourselves to see that the roads are made safe and such incidents as these prevented. This, however, can only be done in one way and that is for the motorists to report to the Highway Commission and the police authorities all incidents of reckless driving that they may note on the highways.

Others prominent in the automobile world join in this demand. Many Boston auto dealers, in interviews with the AMERICAN today, declared every effort should be made to prevent reckless and irresponsible persons from doing injury to themselves and the great majority of autoists who use every care and caution in the operation of their cars.

Bury Victim Today.

It is time to call a halt on reckleseness, careful motorists say, when the amazing toll of death and injuries due to speeding is considered.

New cases in the news columns today tell of further auto crashes.

Mrs William A. Smith of Lexington, who was killed in the seventy-five-mile-an-hour race at Cohasset, will be buried today. An unidentified car is now said to have also figured in the crash, in which two men were badly injured, but Chief Thomas Bates of the Cohasset police and State Detective John H. Scott, who are conducting an inquiry, refused to discuss this point today.

Push State Inquiry.

The investigation by the Highway Commission, began yesterday, will be vigorously pushed. Several witnesses have been heard at the board's room in the Ford building. It is understood the commission is to start a State-wide campaign against speed-maddened motorists, though none of the commission will say anything at present along this line.

Francis Holmes of Wimbrop and Paul R. Moulton of Brookline passed a comfortable night and their condition today was said to be slightly improved. The former is at the Relief Hospital. Moulton is at the Des Brisay Hospital in the

COMMITTEE IS FOR NEW HAVEN TROLLEY BILL

The New Haven Railroad monopoly will be allowed to acquire the Western Massachusetts trolleys if the finding of the Committee on Street Railways is concurred in by the Legislature.

Following an all day executive session of the committee, a report favorable to the New Haven was made today.

There was one dissenter, Representative John H. Stevens of Marblehead. Representative Wasburn of Worcester will offer an amendment providing that the bill shall not in any event become operative until the Railroad Commissioners find that the New Haven is financially able to spend the promised $5,000,000 in the construction of new western trolleys and improving those to be acquired.

Comment was aroused during the executive session of the committee when Frank J. Ladd, lobbyist and beneficiary by the formation of the Hill Towns Improvement Association was called before the committee. Bentley Warren, counsel for the Massachusetts Street Railways, was allowed to argue before the committee in secret session while the public and press representatives were excluded.

The favorable report of the Street Railways Committee caused little surprise at the State House. President Greenwood of the Senate and Speaker Cushing of the House had appointed from their respective branches legislators who had declared themselves in favor of the Mellen gobble of the trolleys before a hearing had been held.

The report surprised Chamber of Commerce officials. Both the Chamber and the United Improvement Association opposed the proposed acquisition.

It was lobbyist Ladd who figured in reports of the Hill Towns Improvement Association as having received substantial payments for legislative work in helping along the plan to have the New Haven gobble up the western trolleys.

'INSULT TO HONOR OF NATION'

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The real menace in the Japanese situation, which today is still causing grave concern in the State, War and Navy departments, appears in the fact that Japan considers its national honor insulted by the anti-alien land legislation of California.

While the administration is awaiting the final answer of Governor Johnson to its appeal for the veto of the bill, the leaders are worrying regarding the next move to be taken by Tokio in the expected event of California's refusal to back down. The United States' unpreparedness to meet an attack on the Pacific coast is becoming more apparent the more the situation is studied.

The following definite facts were ascertained today by the AMERICAN as the real explanation of the existing friction:

Facts of the Situation.

1.—The Japanese protest was not based on the claim that the proposed legislation constitutes a violation of the existing treaty between the two nations, but on the still loftier ground that it amounts to an insult to the national honor of Japan.

2.—President Wilson and Secretary Bryan stoutly maintain that the contemplated law is entirely in keeping with the treaty obligations of the United States and they will not intervene again if Governor Johnson sees fit to allow the law to become effective.

3.—Legal experts of the State Department discover that the British government in Australia and Victoria not only discriminate against the Japanese, but categorize them with the "Pacific Island blacks," which is far more drastic than any measures yet contemplated by the people of the Pacific coast.

4.—The text of the protest made by Viscount Chinda will be made public here and in Tokio simultaneously as soon as the arrangements can be completed.

Expect Bill Will Be Signed.

On account of the stipulated unwillingness of the administration to do more than admonish the attitude of the Federal authorities it is confidently expected by all concerned that the bill will be signed and become effective before the close of another week.

To those who talked with the President today he supported the contention of the State Department that the proposed law does not constitute a violation of the treaty. He even went further and said the legislation was founded upon the treaty obligations.

The information that the Japanese are thinking more about their national honor than the treaty obligations also came from the White House. It was explained that the resentment expressed through Ambassador Chinda was against a seeming effort to discriminate against them on the ground of an alleged ineligibility to citizenship.

Japan's Attacks Unusual.

In commenting upon this phase of the controversy State Department officials pointed out that the attitude of the Japanese toward this country was at least unusual, since the laws of Victoria and Australia are far more stringent. The Commonwealth immigration act and regulations exclude from Australia all Asiatics and Pacific Island blacks. Concessions are made only to the Japanese and Chinese student and tourist classes who carry passports. They are admitted for twelve months.

This regulation, of which there is no complaint of record here, makes the California bill exceedingly mild by comparison, according to all who have made a study of the controversy.

When asked if the United States was not in a position where it would have to defend the action of California, President Wilson said the question could be answered by any one as well as by him. He added that it was a mere matter of judgment.

KEYWORKERS ARE BUSY IN FITCHBURG

FITCHBURG, May 13.—Four mysterious breaks in the heart of the city lead the police to believe that an amateur gang of skeleton-key workers is abroad in Fitchburg. The Howe Drug Store, Fuller's Florist Shop, the Miller Clothing Company and Joseph's Market were all entered by false keys during the night. Money alone was sought, but in all only $5 was secured.

Court Fixes Costs of Girl's Trousseau and Bridal at $399

NEW YORK, May 13.—This is the way that Surrogate Fowler estimated the cost of the trousseau and other necessary wedding expenses of a girl in moderate circumstances:

Wedding gown	$50.00
Two plain dresses	72.00
Four other dresses	60.00
Lingerie	50.00
Linens	100.00
Announcement cards	15.00
Postage for announcements	2.00
Wedding Supper	50.00
Total	$399.00

He made the decision upon the application of Mrs. Marie Lewis, general guardian of her daughter, who bears the same name.

Miss Lewis married a Westerner in moderate circumstances and the mother went to the court for permission to use a portion of a legacy that the girl had received from an aunt to pay the expenses of her wedding.

LOS ANGELES, May 13.—Ramona Borden, daughter of Gail Borden, millionaire milk man, who startled her family and friends a few weeks ago by disappearing from an Eastern sanitarium and going to Boston, today arrived in Los Angeles with her mother, Mrs. Helen Baik Borden.

She and her mother went to Alhambra, the country home of Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Balk, her grandparents, where she will remain until her mother decides where the young heiress is to be sent to school.

Alhambra was the girl's home before the estrangement between her mother and father.

The manager of the Grand Hotel du Casino, near the landing stage at Cherbourg, says that Mrs. Evelyn Thaw did not stop in Cherbourg but continued on to Paris by the first boat train, which arrived here at 4:25 o'clock, Saturday morning.

DOG CLUB FIGHT WON BY WOMAN

Every woman and man dog fancier in the State discussed today the contest for president waged in the Ladies' Kennel Association of Massachusetts, in which Mrs. E. H. Seagrave of Wakefield again triumphed.

No election in a D. A. R. or Pilgrim Fathers, or any other of the old societies was ever fought out so excitedly. It surpassed anything ever pulled off in even Wards 17 or 8, presided over by the Tammany and Hendricks Clubs.

Mrs. John Blake was the other contestant and everything hinged on who knew the most about dogs. Mrs. Blake's friends said she did. Mrs. Seagrave's friends said their candidate knew more about dogs than most of the judges at the shows.

Just as the contest was the most exciting and workers of both candidates were promising each other chocolate sundaes for their votes, Miss Helen Talbot threw a firebrand on the keg of powder by resigning as secretary.

Immediately there was an aviation stunt. The ladies circled around a while as the ballots were being counted. When they finally cooled off and got down to business again the vote showed Mrs. Seagrave elected by a very small majority.

Now here's the difference between a ladies' election and one by men. Shall women vote? Well, heres the answer. There was no attempt to make the vote unanimous. Not a bit of it.

The ladies went right on electing the remainder of the ticket. The Seagrave voters shot angry looks across the hall at the Blake supporters. It was really no place for the white dove of peace.

The fight, or rather contest, ended when the following ticket was announced: Miss Fannie Brooks, vice-president; Mrs. E. H. Squires, Waban, secretary; Mrs. F. S. Thayer of Milton, treasurer.

Then the ladies chatting amiably together left Huntington Chambers and adjourned in a group to a Huntington avenue ice cream emporium, where over chocolate fudges it was unanimously agreed that Mrs. Seagrave would make just the loveliest president for the coming year."

DESLOUVRES MUST STAND TRIAL FOR SLAYING WOMAN

PROVIDENCE, May 13.—Judge Rathburn today refused the application of attorneys for the release of Henri Deslouvres, charged with murder, and decided that the prisoner must come to trial on Monday next.

On June 30, 1912, Deslouvres was imprisoned on the charge of having decapitated Angele Parmentier, a Frenchwoman, who had been living with him as his wife. The woman had disappeared some time before the discovery, in the Blackstone River of her body; the clothing had been removed and the head hacked off with a dull instrument. In April, counsel for Deslouvres filed a plea in the Supreme Court for the release of their client on habeas corpus, because he had not been tried within six months from the day he was indicted.

Harvard "Sophs" Must Talk French or German Now

Four hundred and fifty Harvard sophomores are in turmoil today because of a small black notice which states that before any man is admitted to the Junior class he must pass an oral examination showing that he has done enough work in a modern language to enable him to read it well and to speak it slightly.

Formerly the requirement was merely that a man should pass one of the modern language courses with a mark of C or better.

The oral examination system has likewise been adopted in the department of history, for students who plan to take the degree in history, whether the degree for distinction and honors or not. The department, headed by Professor Hasking, claims that this is a fairer way of testing the student's ability than the old way of making him write an examination.

MAURICE EVANS DIES IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, May 13.—Maurice Evans, well known in theatrical circles and manager of Fritzi Scheff's company, died suddenly today of acute indigestion.

FALSE ENTRIES CHARGED

Tax Collector Arthur C. Pendergast of Revere and Chairman Samuel Seegee of the Revere Board of Assessors held a wardy battle in the Town Hall today and nearly came to blows again.

The trouble started when the tax collector walked into the assessors' office in company with a legal and a hardwetting expert from District Attorney Pelletier's office. The county investigators had asked the tax collector along to assist them in getting over the assessors' books concerning charges that had been made to the effect that the assessors' accounts show a discrepancy of $900 in 1911 and 1912.

When Chairman Seegee spied Collector Pendergast he opend fire.

"You're not wanted here, Pendergast," witnesses say Seegee exclaimed.

"The District Attorney's men want me with them," was the alleged reply.

Clerks Locked for Mixup.

"Get out of here."

"I won't."

"Yes, you will."

"Well, I will, but I don't here to."

Clerks and other witnesses, expecting to see the two men "mix it up," were too excited to remember the exact language. Anyway, the tax collector retreated slowly under the assessor's crossfire. Upon reaching the corridor Pendergast went back to his own office. The district attorney's men were then formally welcomed to the assessors' office by Chairman Seegee and the "probe" began. There was considerable data to go over, and it was late in the afternoon before Mr. Pelletier's men went back to Boston.

Meanwhile Tax Collector Pendergast was busy telling newspaper men and "the faithful" that the report that he is going to resign his job is unfounded. Said he:

"There is no truth in the report. I am not going to resign. The rumor has been circulated about Revere in an effort to injure me. I shall push the charges I have made and shall help the District Attorney's men all I can until all mistakes in the assessors' office have been corrected.

Say Sidewalk "Walked."

By order of the District Attorney, Pendergast would not allow anybody to see the town books that are kept in the Tax Collector's office.

Revere folks were today preparing a formal request asking that the District Attorney's investigators be ordered their investigations of Revere town affairs into the problem "Can a sidewalk walk?"

The request is going to be made in all seriousness. At a recent meeting of the Revere selectmen, Selectman Fitz band wanted to know why a brick sidewalk had not been put down at the corner of Ocean and Shirley avenue, as per order of the selectmen.

Chairman White replied that the sidewalk had been laid, but that the bricks had disappeared. Selectman Hartung agreed with the chairman. Then Chairman White said:

"That sidewalk walked I think. The sidewalk was laid, but I am informed that the bricks are now part of a building erected near the corner of Ocean and Shirley avenues."

It was Police Inspector Silas Waite and William E. Hingston, handwriting expert, that the District Attorney's office sent to Revere today. The investigation is under the personal direction of Assistant District Attorney Thomas K. Lavelle.

The District Attorney's men were instructed to pay especial attention to an item of $301 paid by Ilah McLenton of No. 24 Malden street and entered in the column headed "cash tax paid on rent and personal estate."

Miss Eliza H. McAdams and Miss Clara Smith, clerks in the office, said they knew nothing of the entry and that it was probably made by special clerks employed in 1911.

The trouble which resulted in the District Attorney's office being called in a clash between the collector and assessors' department.

Collector Pendergast claimed he was assaulted by a clerk in the assessors' department when he asked to see the books. When refused a warrant on the assault charge, he brought the matter to the attention of District Attorney Pelletier.

WELLS WEEPS AS HE DENIES SLAYING BABY

ST. ALBANS, Vt., May 13.—Tears ran down the cheeks of Julius Wells and sobs choked his voice as he told the Franklin County Court today in his own defence he did not poison his six year old son Louis, for whose death he is being tried.

Wells, continually wiping his eyes, told of the great love he had for his dead babies. Every eye in the courtroom was wet as the man broke down and wept.

When his counsel, Attorney Warren R. Austin, tried to put him at his ease, Wells braced himself for the first question.

"Now, Julius," asked Attorney Austin, "did you poison your baby boy Louis?

"Before God I did not," Wells answered with quaking voice. "I knew no more about how he was poisoned than you did at the time."

"Well, why were you suspicious against then other members of the family?

"Well," replied Wells, "I never had much to do with my wife's folks, the Fishers. I was surprised to learn they sent meat to us but Thanksgiving Day. When I saw the children grow sick from eating it I got mad and I guess I did say something about their trying to poison all of us.

Augusta Wells, his sixteen-year-old daughter, told of her father's love and said he had always treated the children well. She said she saw the rat poison, but did not know what had become of it after her father had put it in the cellar.

Peter Luman, a neighbor, testified that Mrs. Wells had told him a man told her she could get out if jail easily by swearing her husband was guilty of the crime.

"Mrs. Wells said," according to Luman, "I could not do such a thing, as I could put my hand on a stack of Bibles and swear that Julius knew nothing of how the children were poisoned."

EDGERLY BEFORE FRAUD PROBERS

Special Deputy Surveyor Homer Edgerly went before the Federal Grand Jury, which resumed its investigation of the smuggling frauds, today at the Federal Building. MAUDE ALBERTA ROBINSON, the "affidavit girl," who accuses Lieutenant-Governor O'Hara, chairman of Illinois Vice Committee.

CONFERENCE IS HELD ON O'HARA CASE

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 13.—The Ettelson committee, investigating charges against Lieutenant-Governor Barratt O'Hara, decided today not to hold an investigation here.

A conference was held this afternoon to map out a plan of action for the next hearing. The O'Hara committee investigating white slavery in the State will meet here late in the week.

Before the Senate Committee Maude Robinson testified that she came from Springfield to Chicago on the train with O'Hara and Thomas Vredenberg. She said they went to the Hotel La Salle, where she checked her baggage and where they met Mrs. Mabel Bobush, a widow of Madison, Wis., and daughter of a former Governor of Wisconsin. Then the "famous party of four," it is alleged visited the cafe at the Hotel Sherman.

What was offered as a record of drinks was read to the investigators. First were served four cocktails, after which came at short intervals all kinds of liquor by the gallon, and an assortment of highballs and more cocktails.

The committee failed to find anything to confirm Maude Robinson's unsupported statement that the Lieutenant-Governor visited her apartment after midnight.

It was charged that the "party of four" spent three nights together in a room at the hotel. Half a dozen witnesses, however, testified that O'Hara spent practically all of the three nights in question playing cards at the Press Club.

On the witness stand "the affidavit girl" denied charges she made in an affidavit. It was brought out in testimony that Sam Davis, a liquor dealer, got her to sign the affidavit which he wanted to use to call O'Hara's "bluff."

In his testimony O'Hara said the whole thing is a "frame up" for the purpose of injuring him and forcing him to drop the vice investigation.

TONSILITIS AT CANTON UNDER CONTROL NOW

The tonsilitis epidemic which has swept Canton and Wheaton College at Norton, is believed to have run its course, since the State Board of Health has not relaxed its vigilance.

But four new cases were reported in Canton today. Several minor cases are suspected. The forty-six girls at Wheaton College are all convalescing in the rest room of Holmes College, which has been turned into a temporary infirmary.

Alarmed by the stories published in the morning newspapers, distracted parents rushed to Norton on every train to remove their daughters.

The college authorities got into communication with the parents of the 223 students and assured them that the epidemic was not at all serious. The parents who visited their daughters found them in no danger.

Dr. F. A. Hubbard of Taunton, the Wheaton College physician, said today the tonsilitis had run its course and his forty-six girl patients were well on the road to recovery.

He attributed the epidemic to the girls catching cold at the May Day festival held May 7. The girls were dressed in flimsy fabric and when a cold wave swept in from the sea, contracted severe colds which developed into tonsilitis.

Selectmen Charles T. Oldfield, Elmer S. Lane and Edward M. Holmes, acting as the local Board of Health, have turned over the situation in Norton to the State Board.

The State Board and the Canton Board are working in harmony at last, and representatives of both boards visited the homes of the afflicted and saw that health regulations were being enforced.

GEMS WORTH $20,000 LOST FROM AN AUTO

The mysterious disappearance of $22,000 worth of jewels, lost on an automobile trip to Lowell and Nashua, by Miss Freda Corey, of No. 55 Appleton street, Boston, has come to light in the publication of an offer of a "large reward" for their return.

Although Miss Corey refused to disclose her name, until it was discovered from other members of the party, and declined to give details about the trip, which was made with Dr. Charles S. Valcour, of No. 211 Main street, Nashua, F. C. Williams, also of No. 55 Appleton street, and a girl friend, she admitted that her jewels had disappeared on the trip, which she said, was made for the purpose of placing them in safe deposit in Nashua.

Valued at $22,000.

The first intimation of the loss came in the publication of an advertisement which read as follows:

Jewelry Lost! Large Reward!

LOST—A diamond necklace, one pair earrings, a solitaire diamond, one solid gold watch, crescent on one side, "F. C." on the other, rope chain with ruby; one pair diamond studded links. Valued at $22,000. Large reward for return of same to Waverly Hotel, Lowell, Mass.

A member of the party declared that after stopping at the Waverly Hotel in Lowell for refreshment, they left for Nashua, and it was not until that city was reached that Miss Corey discovered her loss. She immediately became hysterical and it was with difficulty that she became calmed. One of the party immediately returned to Lowell, found no trace of the gems at the Waverly Hotel and inserted the advertisement offering the reward.

Dr. Vancour's Statement.

Dr. Vancour also refused to tell the name of the young lady who claimed to have lost her jewelry. His explanation cast a different light on the affair. Dr. Vancour declares:

The lady, who is a friend of mine, I have befriended in a business way, and I asked her for security for the money which I had advanced her. After sending my representative to her a number of times she insisted that I must meet her myself. Therefore I went to Boston Saturday and called at her residence. She said she had ample security and produced a box which she asserted contained jewels of great value. She put them in the right hand pocket of her coat, and we went to Lowell.

I knew nothing about the jewelry until she went into hysterics over the loss of her property.

I suggested later that the advertisement be inserted in the Lowell paper, and the party returned to Lowell and saw that this was done. A large reward is offered, and naturally we expect to recover the property. The diamond necklace was valued at $17,000, and the other jewelry at $5,000.

LINER REPORTS MANY BERGS IN REGION OF BANKS

Captain A. E. Tribe of the Red Star liner Manitou, which arrived at the port of Boston today from Antwerp, reported that immense fields of field ice and bergs were drifting down across the Newfoundland banks. He defined the southern most limit of ice as latitude 35.30, north, and longitude 48.50, west, and the eastern limit as latitude 48, north, and longitude 40.18, west. The Manitou took a course outside these limits.

The Manitou brought forty-six cabin passengers, and before sailing from Antwerp the Belgian gendarmes created great excitement by rushing on board and arresting an eloping young Belgian couple who were sailing.

FISH PRICES SOAR; NO SCHOONERS IN

Not a single vessel arrived at T Wharf today, and as a result the price of fish nearly doubled in price. Scarcity of bait and bad weather on the fishing grounds are responsible. Steak cod sold today for 8¾ cents, against 5½ yesterday, haddock for 5¾ today against 4½ yesterday, pollock for 3½, against 3¼ yesterday and other fish at proportionate prices.

COURT TO HEAR SHOE MACHINE SUIT TUESDAY

Judges Putnam, Dodge and Brown, sitting as a special full United States District Court, today assigned next Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock as the time for beginning the suit of the United States versus the United Shoe Machinery Company for its dissolution. The suit is to be heard before the full United States District Court.

Attorney Asa P. French urged that the taking of testimony be assigned to an examiner so as to save the time of the full court. Mr. French stated that the case would take two or three months to try and would run into the hot weather.

Judge Putnam in answer to Mr. French said that he was going to try out the new rule of the Supreme Court which affects cases brought under the Sherman Act, and if the court cannot make it workable the case will then be assigned to an examiner.

Judge Putnam further stated that he had no fear of the hot weather and that many times he had purchased fans for the jurors when the government had refused to do so.

Addressing District Attorney French and Attorney William S. Gregg, special assistant to the United States Attorney-General, Judge Putnam said:

You attorneys, next Tuesday, have got to outline to us what you expect to accomplish by this suit; whether it be complete dissolution or lopping off of parts of the system.

It is not now so bad as before the United Shoe Machinery Company was organized, when this courtroom was lined up with machinery used in the manufacture of shoes.

PARALYZED MAN LOSES HIS LIFE IN FIRE AT STANLEY

METHUEN, May 13.—John Donohue, owner of a small store at Stanley, two miles from here on the Lowell road, was burned to death early today, in a fire that destroyed the two-story building and outhouses.

The Donohues slept above the store. Some time before daylight, Mrs. Donohue was awakened by smoke. Climbing out of an attic window, she crawled out over a shed roof and dropped to the ground, going in search of a ladder down which she hoped to be able to assist her husband. Donohue, who was fifty-five years old, and had been partly paralyzed for years, attempt to get down the front stairway, but could not pass the flames. Before he could return to the upper story and reach the window he fell.

LOVE LETTERS BASIS OF BLOCK ISLAND SUIT

PROVIDENCE, May 13. — Intercepted love letters from fifty-eight-year-old Hiram W. Willis, a wealthy Block Island fish dealer, to twenty-four-year-old Mrs. Bertha Stamm Allen form the basis of a $25,000 love suit filed in the Newport County Court by Benjamin F. Allen of Block Island, a young grocer.

Allen claims to have intercepted letters which were written in the most endearing terms by Willis to his wife. One of them now in the hands of Allen's lawyer reads: "Don't worry. If anything should happen to you I will take care of you."

Allen charges that the aged Willis became infatuated with the young wife and charges him with alienating her affections.

Mrs. Allen, formerly Miss Bertha Stamm of East Providence, admitted to the AMERICAN that she knew Mr. Willis very well. But she was emphatic in her denial of their friendship having gone too far.

In a statement she made today she charges her husband with spending much of his time with a cousin, Miss Inez Allen, a young and attractive girl.

Allen, who is twenty-seven, married Miss Stamm in East Providence three years ago. He was at that time working for Daniel Rose, whose store he has since bought out and conducts.

The couple lived happily until March 28, when Mrs. Allen left home, taking with her her two-year-old son.

Mrs. Allen is one of the most attractive women on Block Island. Of slight figure, she has an exceedingly pleasant address and was much sought after by the young men of East Providence.

Accused Wife's Story.

She said today: "Yes, I married this man Allen three years ago when he was nothing but a clerk in a small grocery store on Block Island. I went there to live with him. During the Summer it was great. But in the Winter, after all the Summer visitors had gone, it was one of the most lonesome spots in the world.

"Still I stuck it out and for three years I lived happily with Mr. Allen. Then he grew jealous of me. He was always asking me to tell him where I was every time I went out.

"I didn't get much time to go out, though, as he was out most of the time. He used to spend about all his spare time with his cousin Inez, who works in an ice cream parlor there.

"Night after night I had to stay in that lonesome cold store until I was almost frozen. Then things reached a climax when my husband kicked because I said I didn't want to stay so much in the store nights. Finally he came home one night and accused me of being too great a friend of Mr. Willis.

Put Her Out of House.

"I told him that Mr. Willis a ' I had simply been good friends. He used to be a customer in the store and that's how I came to know him. He was awfully good and nice and many of those long nights when my husband was out calling on his cousin, Mr. Willis came and kept me company in the lonesome store.

"Mr. Allen grew insanely jealous and would not believe me. Then he put me out of the house. Well, there was nothing for me to do but come home to Providence, and I have been living here since March 28, the night he put me out."

The case comes up for trial in the Newport County Court June 2.

TWO poses of Evelyn Provost, cousin of Mrs. John Jacob Astor, who is to forsake society to become a star in moving pictures.

Miss Provost admits as she starts new career that she has the "money-making" habit.

NEW YORK, May 13.—"Why have I decided to go into moving pictures?" repeated the beautiful Miss Adele Rey, better known as Evelyn Provost, a cousin of Mrs. John Jacob Astor, and until a few months ago "just a girl in society," as she expressed it.

"You see, I believe that moving pictures are going to be the greatest field, from a financial point of view, in America. It has so many advantages. In the first place, it is an all-the-year-round job. In the second place, you can see yourself as others see you, which is an advantage which the ordinary actress does not have. More and more actors and great actresses are joining moving picture concerns for these reasons.

"Failures are very rare. Instances of persons working and rehearsing for a play for three months and then, maybe, playing for a week are unheard of in this business. Of course, I would not call it the highest interpretation of art, but since I have given up society I have developed a taste of that American game—'making money.' Better than ever I can now understand why our men keep on working. I like it. It is a great satisfaction to know that you are useful as well as ornamental."

Miss Provost, or Miss Rey, as she insists upon being called, merrily chatted away on every possible subject, including psychology.

"I am always in trembling fear," she continued, "of people wishing me bad luck. I rather have them say nasty, unkind things to me than wishing them to me unbeknown. Why? I believe that if people keep on wishing and thinking about a certain person continually, that person surely will meet with bad luck. I suppose you will call it superstition, but it is not, it is what you might call motor-suggestion.

"I love everybody and I want everybody to love me. Think kind things, think pleasant things, and you will meet with pleasant things and people.

Boston Girl Pupil Elopes Once More, Takes $900 Dog

Pretty Mrs. Vonda Prichard, seventeen, a former student at the New England Conservatory of Music, has a second time eloped with her husband, Frank Prichard, a wealthy insurance agent and coal and timberland owner of Fairmont, W. Va., Cumberland, Md., dispatches today declare.

The couple first met in Boston eighteen months ago. They eloped, but after a week the young wife was persuaded away and taken to Europe, where the father bought her a $900 dog.

The second elopement took place while the father was away. Prichard drove to a point near the Griffin home in Cumberland in a touring car, hurried out the young wife, a steamer trunk and a $900 dog and whisked away before the astonished mother-in-law could interfere.

ELIOT'S COUSIN TO WED NURSE IN MARYLAND

A romance of the sick room was revealed today by the announcement of the engagement of Dr. Rupert Norton of Cambridge, Assistant Superintendent of the Johns Hopkins University Hospital in Baltimore, and Miss Cecilia Hendrickson of Maryland, a former nurse at the institution.

Dr. Norton is the son of Charles Eliot Norton, who was professor emeritus of the History of Art at Harvard, a cousin of President Emeritus Eliot of Harvard and a graduate of both the Harvard Academic and Medical schools.

He met his fiancee while both were assigned to a serious case, when Dr. Norton first assumed his duties at the hospital in 1907 as assistant to Dr. Hurd.

COLEMAN MAY WIN PAROLE FOR BANK CASE AID

George W. Coleman was brought to Boston from the East Cambridge jail again today to assist Receiver John L. Bates in the final inspection of the books of the wrecked National City Bank of Cambridge. It is expected the work will be completed today and Coleman will resume his testimony before Judge Harris in the "star chamber" session tomorrow.

It was said today that as a result of Coleman's willingness to assist the authorities in getting to the bottom of the affairs of the defunct bank, a strong plea will be made to have him paroled when the time arrives. He has served three years of his fifteen-year term, and his behavior has been such that in eighteen months more he will be entitled to apply for a parole.

Coleman's program today was much the same as that of yesterday. He was brought to Boston by Deputy Marshal Thaler and breakfasted at a restaurant in Newspaper Row. Then they adjourned to the Suffolk County Court House where Coleman and Receiver Bates started on the books. The inspection of the books was expected to take all day. Coleman was cheerful and apparently glad to be out of his cell. He has spent much of his time since confined in the East Cambridge jail reading books and magazines.

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Anti-suffrage leaders today feel that the climax of enthusiasm in the fight against votes for women has been reached.

Easier to Support Self Than Be Wife, Says Revere Nurse

Mrs. Blanche Mae Chandler of No. 50 Wilson square, Revere Beach, insists today that she will not consent the suit for divorce filed by Andrew F. Chandler of Winthrop. She says:

After being married several months I decided that I had rather earn my living by working. I returned to my mother's house and studied nursing and housekeeping. Two years later I removed to Revere. I have been able to support myself without difficulty.

EVENT NO. 1

Our Lace, Embroidery and Trimming stores went under new management last week. All hands have been busy sorting, sifting and classifying the stocks.

The report submitted is that the three departments are in a healthy condition. However, the readjustments and re-arrangements brought to light many broken lines and odd pieces—the natural consequences of a full-blooded, great and growing business.

THEY HAVE BEEN DIVIDED INTO 16 LOTS AND WILL BE OFFERED AT PRICES HERETOFORE UNHEARD OF FOR SUCH QUALITIES

If these Laces, Embroideries and Nets were soiled, mussed, crumpled, shelf-worn and yellowed with age—they'd still be great values at the prices we quote in the surrounding sub-divisions. But they are clean, fresh, bright, desirable. Their only fault is that they are lonesome. Come and get them.

WOMEN WATCH SAFE-BLOWERS AT THEIR WORK

SOUTHBORO, May 13.—While four terror-stricken women powerless to act, watched an electric flashlight move back and forth in the darkness in the block across the street, four yeggmen blew the safe in the postoffice here early today and then looted the drug store of Newton & Howard.

The women were in their home. They heard the striking of the iron on the metal. They saw the flash of the electric light and they heard the muffled explosion. When they went to the door a lone man, probably a lookout for the yeggs, ran away. The women closed the door, too frightened to summon help.

The men were at work about three hours. They got nothing at the postoffice. At the drugstore they found $9 in change in the cash register and in the telephone slot machine.

The women who saw the yeggs at work are Mrs. Mary Sanborn and her daughter Gertrude, Mrs. Fred Ingalls and her cousin, Mrs. Clara Waters.

City Market to Cost $5,000,000 Asked by Expert

Secretary Wilfred Wheeler of the State Board of Agriculture, proposes a $5,000,000 municipal market from Faneuil Hall to Atlantic avenue with railroad and trolley connection.

This, he says, would help solve the high cost of living problem and give the consumers fresh produce daily.

If the project, which will depend on the rent of stores, offices and cold storage for the annual revenue, is favored by the Legislature, plans may be called for from the architects.

MATTAPAN WANTS $300 FOR JUNE 7

SEES LASTING PEACE BY U. S. AND ENGLAND

WASHINGTON, May 13.—"Our work, I believe, has rendered impossible any armed conflict in the future."

This statement was made today by Lord Weardale, chief of the British delegation in the conference arranging for the centenary observance of peace between England and the United States.

The foreign delegates to the conference left here today for Philadelphia, where the mayor and other high officials will extend them the welcome of the Quaker City.

The closing event of the Washington visit was the breakfast given at the Army and Navy Club this morning. Prominent Senators and Congressmen joined the American, English, Canadian and Australian representatives at this affair. Speaking of the friendly relations between England and the United States in the centenary celebration plans and other affairs, Lord Weardale said:

"This visit has been like entering the family circle. We find ourselves among friends in this great movement for a continuance of peace.

"We rejoice that we have been able to accomplish during this conference a work which I believe will be permanent and which will not only recall success in the past, but render impossible any armed conflict in the future."

Dr. Cook Appeals to President for Pole Vindication

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Charging government officials with a "propaganda of character assassination," and indicting the National Geographical Society, Dr. Frederick A. Cook has written to President Wilson asking that a commission of polar explorers be appointed to investigate his claim and that of Admiral Peary to the discovery of the North Pole.

"The future of my children demands an exposition of the unfair methods of the arbitrary geographers in Washington," says Dr. Cook in a letter dated "Chicago."

GRANGE TO MEET IN MANCHESTER, N. H.

PAPAYA, NEWEST FRUIT, IS COMING

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The "papaya," a tropical fruit that is shaped like a cantaloupe, colored like a green watermelon and tastes like music, has been made to flourish in Florida by the Department of Agriculture, after years of trials and failures. It soon will be put on the market.

TARIFF CRISIS IN MOVE FOR OPEN HEARINGS

WASHINGTON, May 13.—The future fate of the Underwood tariff bill in the Senate was in the balance today while the Republicans and Democrats debated on the Penrose motion to instruct the Finance Committee to hold open hearings on the measure.

The clash between the opposing Senators was rendered the more interesting by reason of the fact that it was calculated to show the real strength of the supporters of the administration measure.

It is on sugar and wood, the principal schedules in the Underwood bill, that the fight will come, and Democratic leaders anxiously watched the debate to see how far the defection set afoot by Senators Rasdell and Thornton of Louisiana had influenced the Senators from the sugar and wood producing States.

It already had been agreed to refer the Underwood bill to the finance committee without public hearing when that measure was brought over from the House on Friday. Senator Simmons, chairman of that committee, made a motion to this effect, which was immediately supplemented by a motion by Senator Penrose to instruct the finance committee to hold public hearings.

Maybe You Remember When the First Curved Ball Was Thrown.

People said the man was crazy who claimed to have pitched a baseball in a curve. A pitcher would be crazy nowadays if he didn't use a curved ball.

When I first decided to put a ten-cent quality and quantity tobacco on the market and sell it for 5 cents, I met with just as much doubt as that first curved-ball pitcher.

Old heads in the tobacco business said it couldn't be done—said I would have to cut down on the quality, and so on, if I didn't want to lose all my money.

I have done it, men, and MASCOT is selling like hot cakes on its merit and price.

I simply did away with one of the heaviest costs a ten-cent tobacco has to meet—I did away with that perfectly useless tin box in which so many ten-centers are packed.

MASCOT

CRUSHED CUT TOBACCO

The New Idea Smoke for Pipe and Cigarette

is packed in an inexpensive cloth pouch, and that saves me enough money so that I can afford to give you double your tobacco value. When you buy the usual ten-cent tobacco, you pay an awful chunk of your dime for tin alone. So far no genius has been able to figure out that you can smoke tin. Then, why should you pay for it?

I got rid of the foolish goat-fodder tin box right away—and then I found I could give you the very best Kentucky Burley at 5 cents. So I took the highest grade leaves I could buy, let them cure slowly and naturally on the very plantations where they grew, waited until they were ripe and mellow and sweet, and then had them sliced, re-sliced, crushed and thoroughly mixed so that the full delicious quality of those beautiful leaves ran uniformly through my tobacco. I am a Kentuckian born—and I know just how good tobacco ought to be made. I made MASCOT right.

I'm proud of my tobacco, men. I offer it to you without any if's or an's. It is honestly the best tobacco value you can buy anywhere in the world for the price I am asking for it—5 cents.

The quantity is there and the quality is there. I simply ask you to give it a trial. Then I know I'll have a MASCOT smoker for life.

RALLY HERE TO AID LAST FIGHT FOR HOME RULE

A conference will be held at the American House on Wednesday, May 21, of the friends of the Irish cause in New England for the purpose of taking practical steps towards sustaining Hon. John E. Redmond and the Irish Parliamentary party in the first stage of the struggle for the restoration of Ireland's national Legislature.

The call for the conference has been sent out over the names of Thomas B. Fitzpatrick, national treasurer; John O'Callaghan, national secretary; Michael J. Jordan, president of the Central Branch; Michael Morrison, treasurer, Central Branch, and C. O'Connell Galvin, secretary, Central Branch, United Irish League.

Many Invitations Sent.

The conference will not be confined to the United Irish League.

Invitations to attend have been sent to the officers of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, the Irish National Foresters, the Central Council of the Irish County Clubs and various other bodies, whose members are interested in the cause of Irish legislative independence.

The Irish leaders in the British parliament are alive to the fact that new opposition to home rule is being organized by the powerful and wealthy men who are at the head of the Tory-Unionist party, who are still hopeful of being able to upset the Asquith ministry and force another general election during the coming autumn.

Ready for Final Struggle.

The bishop and clergy of Ireland, every member of the Irish party and all classes from the humblest to the highest in the social scale are making ready for what is confidently regarded will be the final stand in this great and historic struggle.

It is to give the friends of Ireland in the United States an opportunity to be counted as supporters of the home rule cause at this critical hour that the conference is called for May 21.

MISS ANNA MARIE HERDLICZKA, Bohemian girl physician, nineteen, who is to be bride of Francis Gallatin.

Francis Gallatin to Wed Beautiful Bohemian Doctor

BY COUNT MOURIK DE BEAUFORT

A marriage of international interest will take place shortly between Francis D. Gallatin and Francisca Anna Marie Herdlicska of Southern Moravia, Austria.

Mr. Gallatin is a great-grandson of Albert Gallatin, who was Secretary of the Treasury under Jefferson and Madison. He is a traveler and explorer of wide experience, is an author, served in the Diplomatic service as attache to the American Embassy in Constantinople in 1901, and during the Spanish-American war served under General Nones in the Cuban army.

Miss Herdlicza belongs to an old Bohemian family. She was educated in Prague, where she took her degree as doctor of medicine. She is nineteen years old and only lately arrived in this country. There is a romantic touch to the coming marriage.

Mr. Gallatin, who is about forty, met his future wife six or seven years ago when she was in a preparatory school in Prague. The little girl took a great liking to the handsome American.

SPEED OF FLYER FOILS HOLDUP OF BREWER BUSCH

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 13.—Two armed men swung on to the railing of the observation end of the private car of Adolphus Busch, wealthy brewer of St. Louis, early today and attempted to board the car. They were thrown off by the speed of the train, which did not slow down as much as they expected for the Kansas City Southern crossing. The millionaire brewer and his physician were asleep in the car, which was attached to the Alton "Early Bird." The attempted holdup was reported to the police here by train officials and a posse was sent to the scene at once. The men attempted to board the train a few feet from the spot where a Kansas City Southern train was held up a few days ago and Jesse J. Hoyt, a millionaire mine owner of Joplin, Mo., was seriously wounded.

Today's Beauty Recipes

By Mme. D'Ille.

"The electric needle for the removal of superfluous hair is both painful and expensive. A quick, safe and sure way to remove wild hairs is to apply a little powdered delatone mixed with water. Just cover the hairs with this paste for a minute or two, wipe off, wash the skin and the hairs will be gone.

"Spring colds are often more stubborn than colds brought on by winter exposure. Mother's balve will break up an ordinary cold in hard or chest over night. It is easy to use, quick to act, and relieves catarrh, croup, sore throat.

"To keep the skin fair, fresh and smooth, apply in the morning a lotion made by dissolving an original package of saxatone in a half pint of witch hazel. It will rid you of or show the powder and prevents the growth of hair. Magazine quickly corrects dark, sallow and blotchy complexions.

"You can recommend Mother's Shampoos to your husband and he will thank you for it. Many men who shave themselves do not shampoo frequently enough. Dandruff, falling hair and baldness are caused by a parasite, and Mother's Shampoo removes these parasites. It restores dry, brittle and faded hair to a glossy, fluffy condition, and keeps the scalp healthy.

AUTOISTS DEMAND COURTS IMPOSE HEAVY PENALTIES TO STOP SPEED MANIACS

Reckless Driving Held Menace to All Who Use Massachusetts Highways.

Back Bay. It was said today it will be some time before either will be able to be out.

SPEED MANIAC MUST NOT IMPERIL PUBLIC, SAYS J. C. KERRISON.

By J. C. KERRISON.

The motor "speed maniac" should be brought up with a quick round turn. He should be placed in a position that will prevent his threatening the lives of others. He should be given no consideration. He is entitled to none.

A man who deliberately turns the highway into a race track is a menace to the public and a disgrace to civilization. He is just a dressed disease and should be placed where he can do no damage.

The sooner this is done the better for the public in general; the better for those motorists who utilize our highways in a safe and sane manner.

Such incidents as that which occurred on the Cohasset road on Sunday, and that which happened in Cambridge on Saturday night are the things which bring abuse upon the motor body as a whole, that stamp motorists as a reckless and dangerous class. They suffer from the work of a very small percentage of their number. It is not surprising that as a class they rebel against this and deplore such incidents as the two just mentioned.

To deliberately plan a race upon a highway, and that, too, upon a Sabbath day, when the roads are crowded with traffic of all characters, is to place in jeopardy the lives of others.

Misdemeanor Under Law.

No man has a right to do this. When he does he should receive the full measure of the law.

To drive a car while intoxicated is a misdemeanor under the law that should be placed among the cardinal crimes. Those who do it should receive a sentence of imprisonment that would be an object lesson and an example to others.

These incidents are of too common occurrence to be permitted to continue without any action on the part of the motorist body. They owe it to themselves in self-defence to take such action as to prevent their repetition.

If the motorists, in using the roads, will take measures to assist in apprehending men of this caliber they will do more towards bringing about a safer condition of the highways than exists or can exist under any other method.

Time to Call Halt.

The motorists as a whole suffer from such incidents as these. The 99 per cent. of the class receives the odium of the work of the 1 per cent. The 1 per cent. has brought a feeling of hostility against the 99 per cent.

The average motorist is a law-abiding individual. He is as careful of others as he is of himself and no body of men deplores such conditions as these any more than those who drive for pleasure or those whose business interests are at stake in the manufacture and sale of motor cars.

It is time to call a halt. The motorists as a body should assist in any measure that has for its purpose the making safer of the highways.

AMAZING ACCIDENT TOLL ROUSES STATE TO SPEED MENACE

The fact that the death toll of the speed maniac may be much greater for 1913 than for any year on record—taken in connection with the killing of young Mrs. Smith—has roused the State to the necessity for action.

Nobody is more emphatic in the demand for the energetic enforcement of the law against the speed maniac than the sensible and sober-minded great majority of automobilists.

The speeder is a menace to himself.

More than that, any law-abiding motorists, he is a menace to everybody else who uses the highway with him.

He is a menace to the family party in an automobile, homeward bound of a Sunday evening after a day on the road. He is a menace to the occupants of horse-drawn vehicles. He is a menace to the very young and the very old—even to the middle-aged pedestrian. Frank R. Sanborn, the Concord writer, confessed the other day that he never crosses Beacon street in Boston—favorite resort of speeders from everywhere—without fearing for his life.

Many law-abiding folk have lately observed that most of the speed accidents take place on Saturday evening or on Sunday. There is something more than a suspicion that too many of these accidents have alcoholic features that the public does not hear about. Veteran chauffeurs declare that nine-tenths of the accidents come from "mixing alcohol and gasoline."

In some parts of the State complaint is made that it is not the courts, so much as the district attorneys, who are responsible for the escape of speedomaniacs with meaningless fines. An effort will be made to create a strong public opinion to encourage district attorneys in their work.

Death Toll 142 in 1912.

Men, women and children to the number of 142 were killed in Massachusetts last year by motor cars. The great majority of these citizens died because some motorists are not satisfied to travel along the highway at anything less than the mad speed of a racing machine. The proper place for a motor race is on a race track, built for the purpose.

Lewis R. Speare, president of the Massachusetts State Automobile Association and past-president of the American Automobile Association, the latter being the national governing body, said today:

Every year that we go to the State House seeking the enactment of reasonable and equitable legislation, we have been told that we are protecting the reckless driver. We are not protecting the reckless driver.

No matter what the law may read there will always be reckless driving. Both of my organizations are strongly opposed to this sort of thing and both would like to see these men who endanger the lives of others placed behind the bars.

We owe it to ourselves to see that the roads are made safe and such incidents as these prevented. This, however, can only be done in one way and that is for the motorists to report to the highway commission and the police authorities all incidents of reckless driving that they may note on the highways.

The motorists should be as anxious to do this as they are to secure good roads. There is no reason why a man cannot sit behind the steering wheel of a car and derive his pleasure without endangering the lives and limbs of others.

The roads of this State are good, but no road in any State are of such a character as to permit a man to drive at racing speed.

Our organizations have always frowned upon road racing. They are now unalterably opposed to it. We are unalterably opposed to the man who drives a car while intoxicated, and I can say that both bodies are ready to do their share toward curbing such incidents as these and punishing the offenders.

BOSTON DEALERS DISCUSS NEED OF BAN ON SPEEDING

Among Boston automobile dealers to discuss today the need of checking speeding on the public highways were:

J. W. BOWMAN of the J. W. Bowman Company:

It is only those who get crazy with the racing bug in their heads that get into such accidents. The sooner those fellows are eliminated the better I shall like it.

The Highway Commission should take the matter in hand and put an end to such recklessness. I understand those fellows could not put machines powerful enough to suit them.

They got just what they deserved.

E. R. HABICK of the Cole Automobile Company:

I say frankly that such accidents as occurred last Sunday and Saturday injure the automobile business as much as they do the general public.

The police and all other authorities ought to get after these reckless law-breakers and punish them to the limit of the law.

Less effort should be put upon the petty offenders who break rules in minor details, and more thought go to the real dangerous offenders. I do not believe that limiting the speed will do any good. Law has never succeeded in keeping men from riding too much liquor, and I do not see how it is going to prevent owners of cars under the influence of liquor from running their machines. It is such who are, in my opinion, responsible for a great deal of the trouble.

There are enough laws in Massachusetts now to provide for reasonable safety, especially in the case of offenders who endanger life by racing.

R. H. ROSS of the Pierce Company:

It is not to be solved by any maximum limit. Some men can be just as dangerous going five miles an hour as others going fifty. Make a limit and you create a community of law breakers, for few would keep to the speed limit when in the country on good roads.

Get after the racers strong and let everyone, pedestrians as well as motorists, protect the reckless drivers.

When a number of complaints come in to the Highway Commission the license of the reckless party should be revoked.

I believe if the public is sufficiently aroused to do this, such recklessness as occurred last Saturday and Sunday would then soon be eliminated.

J. W. MAGUIRE of the Pierce Company:

No twenty-five-mile limit will end the trouble. My object is to get the law-breakers and hit them hard. Dont let them get off with a $100 fine, but give them real punishment.

Then, too, the authorities should spend some time in disciplining the public. I am a believer in the Paris law, which compels the arrest of the pedestrian who gets in front of any vehicle and gets run down. People are not taught to look where they are going and the careless public is often more to blame than the chauffeurs for serious accidents.

The only law which will make everything safe is a law providing for a sufficient amount of brains for each member of society to prevent him from doing foolish things.

RESTRICT AUTOS AT REVERE BEACH TO PROTECT PUBLIC

Beginning June 17, as a protection to pedestrians, Revere Beach boulevard is to be closed to motorists on Saturday, Sunday and holiday afternoons and evenings until Labor Day, on order of the Metropolitan Park Commission.

The rule closes the boulevard from the end of the Revere Beach parkway as far as Revere street. The hours when motor vehicles will be excluded are between 2 and 11 p. m. Last Summer a number of accidents at the beach were caused by motor vehicles.

TWO GIRLS HURT AS AUTO PUPIL CRASHES CAR INTO CARRIAGE

Elias J. Maria of No. 58 Verndale street, Brookline, while learning to run an auto, crashed the machine into a carriage in which Mi s Dorothea H. Melcher of No. 25 Garrison road, Brookline, and Miss Marie B. Emmons, No. 35 Garrison road, Brookline, were riding, at the corner of Commonwealth avenue and Pleasant street, Allston. Miss Melcher was thrown head first through the glass windshield of the car and Miss Emmons was thrown to the street. Their pony was badly injured and the carriage wrecked.

AUTO TRAFFIC RULES STUDIED ON STREET BOARD MAN'S TRIP

Commissioner James A. Gallivan of the Board of Street Commissioners and John J. O'Callaghan, the board's secretary, just back from Chicago, Washington and New York, found some regulations in Washington which, they say, they would like to see applied in Boston. Two relate to the operation of motor cars.

There is a rule in Washington which provides that "no person shall use a horn or other sound signal except to give warning to drivers of other vehicles and to pedestrians."

Washington also prohibits the use of headlights on automobiles "in the business, or congested sections, unless so lowered as not to dazzle or blind any other driver, operator or pedestrian on the streets or highways of such sections, or make it in anywise unsafe or difficult for any such drivers, operators or pedestrians to ride, drive or walk on said streets or highways."

Auto Speeders, Here Is the Law of the Commonwealth!

Chapter 534—Acts 1903.

Section 22. Whoever upon any way operates an automobile or motor cycle RECKLESSLY or while under the INFLUENCE OF INTOXICATING LIQUOR, or so that the lives or safety of the public might be ENDANGERED, or upon a bet, wager or RACE, or who operates a motor vehicle for the purpose of making a record and thereby violates any provision of sections sixteen and seventeen of this act, or who knowingly goes away without stopping and making himself known after causing injury to any person or property, or who uses a motor vehicle without authority, shall be punished by a FINE of not more than TWO HUNDRED DOLLARS or by IMPRISONMENT for a term not exceeding SIX MONTHS, or by both such fine and imprisonment; and if any person be CONVICTED A SECOND TIME of operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, he shall be punished by IMPRISONMENT for a term of not less than ONE YEAR and not more than TWO YEARS.

A conviction of a violation of this section shall be reported forthwith by the court or trial justice to the commission, which shall revoke immediately the license of the person so convicted. If it appears by the records of the commission that the person so convicted is the owner of a motor vehicle, or has exclusive control of any motor vehicles as a manufacturer or dealer, the commission may REVOKE the certificate of registration of all motor vehicles so exclusively owned or controlled.

Whenever any person so CONVICTED appeals, the commission shall SUSPEND forthwith the LICENSE of the person so convicted, and shall order the license delivered to it, and shall not reissue said license unless such person is ACQUITTED in the appellate court, or unless the commission in its discretion, after an investigation upon a hearing, decides to reissue it. No new license or certificate shall be issued by the commission to any person convicted of a violation of this section until after sixty days from the date of such final conviction, nor thereafter except in the discretion of the commission.

HARVARD HONOR MEN LEADERS BY INNATE ABILITY

The Student Council at Harvard in its investigation of how the average student in the two upper classes spends his time says the man of high distinction in college work does not obtain his honors by sheer dint of work, but, considering things in the large, stands out above his fellows because of native ability.

The canvass shows that the A men who replied spend an average of six and eight-tenths hours a day in study, two and two-tenths hours in outside work, two and seven-tenths hours in "loafing." The "outside work" includes time spent in athletics or other college interests not related to studies.

The B men spend almost as much time in study, but give more time to outside interests and a fraction less time to loafing. The C men reported noticeably fewer hours of study and an almost corresponding increase in the time given to loafing. The D men spent four hours a day in loafing and a fraction more in study.

The report continues:

The B men perform an equal amount of work, as far as time spent is concerned; but they fail to attain the standard set by their superiors. The C men, it is true, work less, but this is not to be taken as a sign that they might receive A's if they worked harder, but that they lack the ability and application necessary to intellectual distinction. The same lines that are drawn in the world outside are existent, though perhaps not recognized, in the college microcosm.

SULTAN NO BETTER THAN HIS SUBJECTS IN OUR LAW COURTS

NEW YORK, May 13.—The Sultan of Turkey is no better than his humblest subject in American law courts for Justice Davis of the Supreme Court in the Turkish ruler's suit to get $10,000 in satrare on the life of a wealthy American, has ordered the potentate give the customary security for the payment of costs, the same as anyone else.

GIVE 'NEPTUNE GARDEN' MORE TIME AT KEITH'S

At Keith's this week the great aquatic spectacle "Neptune's Garden of Living Statues," or "The Enchanted Pool," is continued, and bids fair to be one of the greatest attractions at this popular vaudeville house for several seasons.

Another feature is the wonderful performance of Owen McGiveney, the gifted Irish actor who is in America for the first time. Mr. McGiveney gave a sketch from "Oliver Twist," in which he played the parts of Sykes, Fagin, Monks, The Lodger and Nancy, and so incredibly swift were the changes of costumes and makeup that skeptics are not wanting who refuse to believe one man is giving the whole show.

Leo Carrillo, the good-natured Californian, whose Chinese and Italian dialect stories and rapid-fire original verse and puns are always welcome in Boston, is back again, better natured and funnier than ever. Frank Parish, the eccentric dancer, the Rose Brothers' Trio, Walter Leroy and Emily Lytton, comedians, Nestor and Bergman, a comical pair in a funny difficulty and Alvarado and Scott, in a clever surprise act, are among the other splendid parts of the big bill. The Edison talking pictures are also shown.

Pictures of Crews.

Motion pictures of the varsity crews training on the Charles River are being exhibited at H. F. Keith's Theatre this week at the close of the regular vaudeville show.

Globe Theatre.

The new Summer policy at the Globe was started off yesterday with an excellent show, both in the vaudeville and picture sections. The Zig Zag Trio, three clever young comedians with excellent voices, offered a lively singing skit; Frederick and his pony, "Don," were well received. "Don" is one of the most intelligent animal actors in vaudeville and never fails to create interest. The Van Dykes pleased with some excellent cartoon work, and Miss Helen Loraine was a clever girl who sang well and played stringed instruments brilliantly. Grenier and La Fore had an acrobatic act somewhat different from the usual run, and the Rays and the many other features were attractive. The pictures program will be changed on Thursdays.

Gaiety Theatre.

"The Fish Clothes Man," which came to the Gaiety Theatre yesterday with the Bowery burlesque, proved to be smart entertainment, with plenty of that particular brand of fun that makes good Spring-time diversion. There was both music and comedy in this effair, and to give the show its proper seasoning a score of lively young women pranced, sang and cut didoes. The company will remain only this week.

St. James Theatre.

"Girlie Girls," a lively feature, headed the new bill at the St. James Theatre yesterday. New pictures were also exhibited. There will be a complete change of program on Thursday.

CRAIG COMPANY GIVES "COMEDY OF ERRORS"

John Craig and his Castle Square Theatre players presented Shakespeare's "The Comedy of Errors" to a delighted audience at the Castle Square Theatre last night. The action of the comedy might not have been as swift as that of modern comedy lines, but it was just as sure, and when one had sat through, somehow or another he just got an understanding of how all these comedies on mistaken identity are built.

They all come out of "The Comedy of Errors," or else they never were in any books at all, for according to John Craig's history, printed in his program, the first production of this play was in 1623.

In the play last night John Craig was the Antipholus of Syracuse. William F. Carlton was the Antipholus of Ephesus. The Dromio of Syracuse was Al Roberts. The Dromio of Ephesus was Donald Meek.

All these players are old favorites of the Castle Square audiences, and they displayed a familiarity with their roles which won them instant favor. Miss Mary Keener, as wife of Antipholus of Ephesus, Miss Laurett Browne as Luciana, her sister, and Miss Florence Shirley as Lesbia, had the principal female roles.

The settings for each scene were designed by Livingston Platt, who depends rather on lines against background to suggest the blue rather than detail.

Next Week's Bills.

"Get Rich Quick Wallingford" will be the attraction at John Craig's Castle Square Theatre next week.

"The Gentleman From No. 19" will come to the Tremont Theatre next Monday.

Normbegan Park will open for the season next Sunday. The vaudeville theatre will present its first show next Monday.

E. H. SOTHERN and Julia Marlowe, who opened their engagement at the Shubert Theatre last night.

OLD HOMESTEAD, BACK IN BOSTON, MEETS SUCCESS

"The Old Homestead," with E. L. Sunder, to whom Denman Thompson handed down the right of succession as Joshua Whitcomb, is back again in Boston.

The survival of a quarter of a century on the American stage seems to have dimmed not at all the popularity of the success of 1886, and one reason for this survival may possibly be found in the fact that those responsible for the present production have kept away from the hazards of attempting to introduce modern features in its well-worn comedy, and equally hackneyed dramatic situations. It is still old-fashioned. It has changed no more than the life it portrays, in its quarter century of life.

The singing of the quartet, a feature which has grown into "The Old Homestead," was exceptionally well done.

In the role of Jack Hazard, the happy tramp and society gentleman, Fred Clare was seen at his best.

Special mention should be given Walter F. Keily, Charles H. Clark, Percy Matson, Miss Minnie Stansil and Mrs. Maggie Breyer as Aunt Matilda.

SOTHERN AND MARLOWE AT THE SHUBERT

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

There is encouragement for William Shakespeare, even in the most untimely of seasons. Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe found it that way at the Shubert last evening, where they wisely began their annual distribution of classics with a comedy that put everybody in good humor. Not even the rival charms of a red hot Summer show just breaking into life at another theatre a block away could rob the Sothern-Marlowe reception of its regulation mid-season fervor.

In selecting "Much Ado About Nothing" for their first venture in the engagement at the Shubert, these distinguished dealers in Shakespearean drama brought to light their only new production of the season. It was a happy choice, not alone for the natural interest that the devoted followers of Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe must have had in any addition to their already long list of plays, but also for the reason that it is a good time of the year for dramatic subjects of lighter vein.

You could laugh heartily with Shakespeare last evening.

Sothern at Best.

The performance was clothed in becoming fashion, both in respect to the purely mechanical features of the production and in its treatment by the co-stars and their associates. Mr. Sothern is always at his best in comedy roles, and "Much Ado About Nothing" gave him rare opportunities to add to his string of victories as a comedian. Even the natural nervousness of his stage manners and the thoughtful note that manifests itself in his voice proved more than helpful during the moments when broad comedy demanded his attention. Mr. Sothern's Benedick was a skilfully executed characterization. He not only kept you interested in his movements but he boosted your drooping spirits.

The sharp tongued Beatrice gave Miss Marlowe scrious as well as frivolous work. The eighteen or so months that have passed since Miss Marlowe was last in Boston have yielded a silliness of figure that added new physical charms to an already generously gifted personality. There was a girlishness in her Beatrice that was deliciously attractive.

A glance at the Sothern-Marlowe official family revealed but few changes in the list of players of folk who were present at the last engagement. Frederick Lewis still leads the younger men of the company, while Sidney Mather, William Harris, Milnes Tilden and Malcolm Bradley follow closely behind. Mr. Bradley was especially conspicuous last evening in the small character role of Verges, a tottering old man. He has a habit of making small parts look large.

Brilliant Opening.

One of the most amusing of Shakespeare's comedies, although not produced as frequently as others, "Much Ado About Nothing," gave Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe a brilliant opening for their three weeks of strenuous labor. It was a brilliant performance in many ways—well acted, beautifully costumed and provided with a scenic production that appealed to the artistic eye.

The same play will be repeated this evening.

KING ALFONSO AND KAISER MAY MEET

MADRID, May 13.—It is announced positively that during his visit to Paris, King Alfonso made a definite offer to President Poincare of a Franco-Spanish entente. Another report is that King Alfonso will meet the Kaiser in Holland during the Summer.

MISS M'DANNEL IN NURSERY SCENES AT TOY THEATRE

Miss Henrietta McDannel was responsible for an exceedingly good performance at the Toy Theatre, before an audience which included many young people, in nursery scenes which gave her scope for every different and peculiar talent she possesses in impersonating child life.

Miss McDannel will be remembered for her performances as "Peter," in John Craig's product on of the "End of the Bridge." In her performance at the Toy Theatre she acted alternately as a boy and a girl, recited, sang, told stories and rhymes.

PROGRESSIVES ARE GIVEN FIRST PLUM

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Although the Progressive party polled millions of votes in the last presidential campaign, so far as known it received no morsel of patronage "pie" until today, when Carl Cooper of Kansas was made "a special messenger to the minority" in the House at an annual salary of $1,800. The Republicans of the House have six such jobs allotted to them.

JERSEY BARBERS STRIKE FOR I. W. W. RECOGNITION

NEW YORK, May 13.—Jersey City is "next" in the barbers' strike which began in Brooklyn a week ago and is rapidly spreading over the environs of Greater New York. One thousand barbers in Jersey City voted to lay down their razors and shears today unless their employers recognize the Industrial Workers of the World, with which organization the barbers' union has now become affiliated.

Following a series of riots along Broadway after a mass meeting of journeymen barbers, the police were on the alert to prevent any further outbreak. Mobs of 300 and 400 men stoned shops and terrorized patrons. At the Hotel St. Denis eight customers with their faces covered with lather, were driven into the streets.

LEASE HOUSE FOR FIRST FRIEDMANN INSTITUTE IN U. S.

NEW YORK, May 13.—The first Friedmann institute for the treatment of tuberculosis patients and distribution of the turtle serum is to be at No. 878 West End avenue, on the southeast corner of the avenue and One Hundred and Third street, in a region of costly stone dwellings and apartment houses. The neighbors aren't especially pleased and some of them are meditating a protest. The Elsner-Mendelson Drug Company, purchasers of the German investigator's remedy, has leased for three years a twelve-room four-story and basement house, owned by Mrs. Lillian Sims and until yesterday occupied by Mrs. Sims and her husband, Dr. H. Marlco Sims.

FINDS EFFICIENCY OF LABOR HIGHEST IN UNITED STATES

WASHINGTON, May 13.—That United States industries are carried on at a higher degree of efficiency than those of other nations is indicated by a report issued by Secretary of Commerce Redfield today. The report shows that in the United Kingdom, one-sixth more power and two and one-half times as many wage earners are required to produce a set output of equal value. In fifteen of the seventeen industries compared the outlay for wages is higher in England than here for an equal output. In the manufacture of gloves and railway cars, however, the labor cost is 4 per cent. to 20 per cent. higher in this country.

SMALL CHANGE IN OUR NEW NICKELS

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Secretary McAdoo has ordered a slight change in the new nickel. The words "Five Cents" will be more closely defined.

KING ALFONSO AND KAISER MAY MEET

MADRID, May 13.—It is announced positively that during his visit to Paris, King Alfonso made a definite offer to President Poincare of a Franco-Spanish entente. Another report is that King Alfonso will meet the Kaiser in Holland during the Summer.

MRS. HELEN TALBOT DEAD IN ATLANTIC

Mrs. Helen Talbot of Atlantic, one of the best known breeders and exhibitors of Irish terriers in the United States, died today at her home in Atlantic of heart failure. Mrs. Talbot was the secretary of the Ladies' Kennel Club of America.

PURE FLOUR FIGHT PUSHED TO THE LIMIT

WASHINGTON, May 12. The move for "pure" flour has been carried to the Supreme Court by the Department of Justice. Attorney General Wickersham and Assistant Attorney General Adkins have filed with the court an application for a review of the decision of the Eighth United States Circuit Court of Appeals, which denied the right of the government to condemn flour bleached by electricity by the Alsop process.

The controversy turns upon the interpretation of that section of the pure food and drugs act which declares that an article shall be deemed adulterated if it contain any added poisonous ingredient which may render such article injurious to health.

The government claims that this law forbids the addition of any poisonous ingredient to an article, even though the quantity be minute and the resulting injury to health be remote from the particular article. In a decision of this character the Circuit Court of Appeals held that the poisonous ingredient must be added in such quantities that there is a possibility of injury to health.

The construction put upon the law by the Circuit Court of Appeals will render the statute difficult if not impossible of enforcement according to the Attorney General.

If minute quantities of nitrates may be added to flour, it was declared in a government brief presented to the court of appeals, no reason is discernible why half to the coffee bean, of sulphate of copper to peas, of arsenic or lead to baking powders, of Martius yellow to macaroni, of wood alcohol to flavoring extracts, so long as it is not proposed that enough in each case has been added to possibly injure the health of someone, then it is said to be incapable of enforcement. If such limits must be shown, what standard of resistance is to be adopted? Will it be that of the sickly infant or that of the strong man?

WORSHIP OF STYLISH CLOTHES INSANITY SIGN, SAYS PUTNAM

The desire for and worship of stylish clothes may be a form of insanity.

Dressing a child too well is giving it cause to take too much pride in its appearance and become the seed of a disorder which it cannot overcome in later years.

The desire for many beautiful gowns or many suits of clothes often becomes the most important thing in life. — Dr. J. J. Putnam in lecture at Psychopathic Hospital.

Urges Bureau of Divorce to Grant Decree on $2 Fee

LOS ANGELES, May 12. Mrs. Harris R. Huston, director of the Parent-Teacher Federation, declares divorces should be as easy to secure as marriage licenses. She advocates a bureau for severing matrimonial ties upon payment of a $2 fee, she says.

The wanting of a divorce is sufficient reason for obtaining it.

I think there should be a bureau to render decisions about property settlements and the custody of children when these matters are in dispute, but no should have no power whatever to deny decrees.

U. S. AGENT IS TO VISIT SHOE CITIES

WASHINGTON, May 13. Arthur H. Putnam, commercial agent of the Bureau of Commerce, is to be sent to Boston, Lynn, Salem, Beverly and Brockton, Mass., soon to discuss with the shoe manufacturers of those centres, the condition of the industries in which they are interested. Mr. Putnam has just returned from a two years' tour of Europe and Asia, during which time he investigated the shoe and leather industries there. His trip to New England will be with a view to giving to the manufacturers this information which he has collected.

It's the Style to Wear Patches

But not on the seat of your trousers.

To have patches on your coat to serve as pockets, however, is quite the proper caper.

Unlined outing suits must of necessity have patch pockets, but the vogue has spread to include the regulation three-piece garments also—and a mighty pleasing innovation it makes, too

We plead guilty to the charge of being the first to show patch-pocket suits in any quantity in this city, and also admit that we have a wide variety of patterns in this popular model.

Among others, the new black and white pencil stripes are both beautiful and plentiful as well as in great demand. The latest arrival of this description is a most remarkable value at

PRESCOTT BIRET FINISHES FIRST IN BOAT RACE

HARVARD CREW LACKED HARD FINAL SPURT

By CONSTANCE S. TITUS

(American Intercollegiate Amateur Champion)

[illegible]

Lacking in Final Spurt.

Princeton's victory was well merited. The Orange and Black proved itself the best crew by overcoming a very disadvantageous start. Before ten strokes had been rowed Harvard was a quarter of a length ahead of the other two boats, Princeton and Pennsylvania, bung on gamely, however, and made a very pretty race of it up to the mile mark. Harvard Bridge. Here Harvard had a clear lead of half a length.

Somewhere within the shadowy dark pass of the bridge the race was lost by Harvard and won by Princeton. For when the boats reappeared the Orange and Black was in front. It was an advantage never to be relinquished. Try as the Crimson would to cut down the lead, the Tiger was never to be caught in sight. And as it sat serenely proved the victors had more in reserve than their most fervid rivals.

It took at first as if the Crimson were keeping something in reserve for a final spurt. When they broke away Jim Wray's men hit a clip of 36 strokes to the minute. Penn was making 34, while Princeton, which had the poorest start of all, immediately hit up a 35 clip. Princeton's stroke was very short, and until it was lengthened out the Tigers made no gain.

The calm deliberation of Harvard, together with the frantic efforts of the Tigers, launched the three contestants at the three-quarters mark. Here the proverbial blanket would have covered the trio.

Penn Left in Rear.

Princeton now was showing 40 strokes the minute, Pennsylvania 38 and Harvard 32. The Crimson, though, was showing by far the best form, and seemed to be under wraps. These conditions continued up to the mile mark.

Here Princeton raised her stroke and Harvard responded. The two shells began to pull away from Pennsylvania. Harvard appeared to have completely mastered the situation as the leaders drew apart, both in the lead. Princeton held the upper hand when the crews again answered.

Whatever transpired while the rivals were hidden from view it was apparent that the Crimson had suffered. There was no life in the boat. Princeton was again rowing a very short stroke with hardly any body swing and with a great deal of leg drive. The chief work of the day was done on the sides. I did not think the crew could possibly last the distance. But I was fooled, as I suppose Harvard had been fooled.

Game Effort by Harvard.

In the last half mile Harvard's crew tried gamely to pick up the stroke when Captain Abeles called upon his men for a spurt. The Tigers, however, were prepared for this and themselves responded manfully to every challenge. Princeton was a matter of fact, appeared much fresher at Harvard at the finish. The Tigers were able to give three responding cheers for Old Nassau before they paddled to the float.

PICK GIBBONS TO WIN BOUT OVER CHRISTIE

BOUTS TONIGHT

Mike Gibbons vs. Gus Christie, Joe White vs. Jimmy Moriarty, Oscar Lloyd vs. Kid Thomas, and Tommy Flanagan vs. Barney Mitchell, Atlas A. A.

Leach Cross vs. Johnny Dohan, Kid Alberts vs. Frank Loughrey, Patsy Kline vs. Kid Black, and Dave Kurtz vs. Tommy Maloney, New York.

Ollie Kirk vs. E. McDonald, and Young Terry vs. B. Smith, Brooklyn,

Mr. Michael Gibbons, the St. Paul wizard, phantom, "welterweight champion," etc., etc., will make his debut in a Boston ring this glorious May evening. We have all read a great deal about Michael and his wonderful speed and ripping punch, but we have not yet seen the Western youth in action.

Gibbons will clash with Gus Christie of Milwaukee in a little twelve-round bout at the Atlas A. A. tonight. It promises to be a swell fight if Gibbons and Christie live up to their reputations.

The "bookies" have made Gibbons a favorite, very believe that his remarkable science and stinging punches will cause the downfall of the Milwaukee battler. Experts, however, who have seen Christie in action say that he is a regular big league fighter and that if Gibbons thinks he is going to win easily he is due to receive a sad awakening.

Christie Is Rugged Battler.

Christie has been working out with "Young" Donahue of Roxbury for the past few days. Donahue says that Gus is one of the strongest 154 pound boxers that he has met in a long time and that he is certain to make things interesting for Gibbons.

The bout has attracted a great deal of interest, and a good size crowd of "fans" is expected to turn out in order to witness the festivities. Gibbons, of course, is the drawing card. He is one of the best known boxers in the country.

Mike started to win notoriety from [illegible] quite two years ago. [illegible] from with a rush, defeating some of the leading glove men in the country.

Christie and Gibbons are both down to weight for tonight's bout. They will be at their best when they enter the ring. It is safe [illegible] fore try his hardest to earn the decision.

Gibbons Ready for Fray.

This is the first bout in which Gibbons has been [illegible] for [illegible] of months and he seemed [illegible] [illegible] training in New York for [illegible] three weeks.

Joe White of South Boston and Jimmy Moriarty of Lowell will clash in the semi-final bout of ten rounds. Moriarty is a veteran of the ring, and says that his cleverness will enable him to [illegible] White.

There will be two six-round preliminaries. Oscar Lloyd of Beverly crosses with Kid Thomas of Lawrence, while Tommy Flannagan of Cambridge will entertain Barney Mitchell of the United States Navy.

Right Off the Bat

BY RILEY.

THROUGH the loss of Joe Wood alone the Red Sox have fallen into a hole from which it will be hard, if not impossible, to extract themselves. Wood had just shown signs of returning to last year's form when he was injured. He tried to work yesterday, but the Tigers, who were three runs behind in the eighth, batted out a victory in the two remaining sessions.

* * *

WITH Wood in last year's form it is safe to say that he would have won five ball games since the date of his injury. Those five would have given the Sox fourteen victories and two defeats today, instead of nine victories and fifteen defeats. That would put them in fourth place, close up to the leaders and within a striking distance of first place. With Wood crippled they are rather hopelessly clutched to sixth place and with about as much chance of dropping lower as of climbing higher.

* * *

WOOD himself thinks that his pitching thumb is coming around all right and that he needed yesterday's effort to get into shape. Whether he is right remains to be seen. He thought he was right when he made light of a Washington surgeon's advice to keep a splint on his thumb and refrain from using his pitching hand for several days. But he was mistaken, because the thumb failed to heal and he was unable to clutch a baseball for two weeks.

* * *

WOOD'S injury shows the value of one star pitcher to a baseball team. One first-class flinger will keep a team in the pennant race. If Washington had lost Walter Johnson and has not even straight victories, the senators would now have seven wins and fourteen losses, instead of the reverse, and would have a lower percentage than the Red Sox have today. New York, without Matty and his six victories against one defeat, would have five wins and seventeen losses and the Giants would be just a few points above Cincinnati.

* * *

JOHNSON, the Indian, who lost yesterday for the first time, has pitched almost all of Cincinnati's few victories and, similarly, Keating has kept the Yankees from becoming an utter and absolute joke.

* * *

THE Sox had a chance to slip into fifth place yesterday, when Washington beat St. Louis. With the score 7 to 4 in the seventh at Detroit it looked like they would climb. But then came the smash up.

* * *

A CROWD of about 6,000 at South End Park yesterday was the largest Monday gathering recalled in recent years at the National League grounds. The winning streak of the Pilgrims, who have not been beaten at home since Saturday, April 26, and the brilliant game the former tail-enders are playing, was responsible. They are showing consistent baseball and Stallings' strategic moves have pulled them out on top in several close games.

* * *

DICK RUDOLPH looks like a valuable acquisition to Stallings pitching staff. He was effective in the pinches. His two hits—both of them lucky safeties—both counted in the scoring when scoring was necessary to pull out a close victory.

TRACK STARS PREPARE FOR CHICAGO MEET

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

(Quarter-Mile Champion of the United States and Canada.)

Although college track athletics attract a great deal of the attention of the followers of that kind of sport, the club athletes will soon be busy. It has been decided that the national track and field championships in Chicago, as Everett C. Brown has come forward with an offer of $5,000 for the privilege of holding the championships at the Olympic games at one to be held in Chicago during the latter part of June and the first of July. It is probable that the national championships will be held on a Sunday, as the law which has been suggested by [illegible] B. This comes on a Sunday. There is no law in Chicago that will forbid the managers of the meet from holding these games on a Sunday afternoon.

Although these games have been called the American Olympic games, they cannot be regarded as such as it is only a few of the followers of track sports in that section of the country. The official set of Olympic games will come in 1916 and they will be held in Berlin, Germany.

Owing to the national track championships being held in July, the New England Association will have to split the games the latter part of June. The winners of the different events will be sent to Chicago if their performances show that they will have an equal chance to cope with the athletes from the other sections of the country.

The only place that has been suggested for the holding of the New England championships is the track at Tech Field, Brookline. An effort will, however, be made to secure some better track as the Brookline circuit is very soft in comparison with many other quarter-mile tracks.

DETROIT, May 13.—The world's champion Red Sox will probably depend upon Hugh Bedient to stop the Tigers on today's game. Both Detroit and Boston have each won one game, and today a contest should be hard fought, with the chances favoring a Red Sox victory.

In apparent victory there was data for "Lefty" Leonard, the Red Sox husky Denver recruit twirler, yesterday. While in the lead in the seventh inning, Leonard cracked a zipping triple to left that started a red hosed rally that didn't stop until the world's champions had amassed four runs.

But in starting this rampage, Leonard ceased his own downfall and eventually his club's defeat by an 8 to 7 score.

History Repeats Itself.

Again and again it has happened that the pitcher who makes a long hit that requires him to run the bases at full speed weakens after his extra exertion. Although Leonard was the first man up and he had plenty of time to recover from his three pip sprint, he was not the same pitcher when he stepped into the box for the latter part of the seventh inning that he had been the six previous.

After holding the Tigers to three hits, he passed two and allowed two singles, scoring two runs. With two men on, Arling Manager Wagner hustled Joe Wood into the box.

Wood did little but demonstrate that he isn't ready for real pitching as yet. The psychological effect of his entrance into the game was enough to stave off further scoring in the seventh inning, but in the eighth the Tigers got to the tosser for four hits in a row, one of which, by Gainer, went through Speaker to the flag pole while Del chased home after Cobb and Veach, who scored. The count was tied.

A walk, a single and two sacrifices broke the tie in the ninth. The Tigers certainly could not kick on the break of the game that brought them a victory after Manager Jennings had thrown it away by insisting on letting Hoines, a recruit, get pounded to a pulp and then trying to win it by jockeying pinch hitters, base runners and batteries.

Jennings Jockeyed with Team.

Hughie used about every man he had to beat the Sox. While the crowd was yelling for him to derrick Houze in the second inning, he let Cox pound him for three runs and three hits in a row, broken only by a pass. When Houze had passed Yerkes in the third and was starting to pass Speaker, Hughie called a halt and replaced Hoines with Iaviteg, another recruit.

Knuttter lasted until the seventh inning, when Leonard started the assault on him that finally cost him his own game. Veteran Joe Lake finished with Young flying

Why the Sporting Section of the Boston Sunday American Is the Best in New England

Here are seven reasons why the sporting section of the Boston Sunday AMERICAN is the best in New England:

FIRST—Last Sunday it contained twenty more articles of live sporting news than its nearest competitor, twice as many as the third and nearly three times as many as the fourth in the race.

SECOND—All of its sporting news was classified, so that the reader could find what he wanted at a glance. This was true of no other Sunday sporting section.

THIRD—It was complete. For instance, it contained the result of every baseball game played in Greater Boston, in each case including some description and the score. It contained all the golf, tennis, pugilistic, horse, college and school athletics and other sporting news.

FOURTH—It had the best illustrations. Its pictures were made by the most capable photographers and the ablest engravers and they showed the result of high class work in their striking contrast with those published by other Sunday newspapers.

FIFTH—It contained the best comic pictures. Fisher, Tad and McManus contributed to its pages. Their superiority over other comic artists in New England is conceded.

SIXTH—It had the aid of the best sporting writers in the world.

SEVENTH—It devoted more space to sporting news than any other Sunday paper in New England—seven pages.

These are some of the reasons. There are many others. You should see for yourself by ordering it next Sunday. Nearly everybody in New England reads the sporting section of the Boston Sunday AMERICAN.

Sidelights on Sports

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

SOME guessing, or conjecturing, or surmising, or whatever you care to call it in that last game between the Pilgrims and the Cardinals, was there not?

A guess, we are told, is a swift conclusion from data directly at hand and held as probable or tentative, while one confessedly lacks material for certainty. A conjecture, we are led to believe, is preliminary and tentative, but more methodical than a guess. A surmise, we are credibly informed, is floating and visionary and often sinister.

WHATEVER it was there was plenty of it at the old South End grounds. Miller Huggins essayed to match baseball wits with George Stallings and came out second best. Any manager of a ball club who attempts to out guess Stallings in a deal of baseball cards has to get up considerably earlier in the morning than 4.25, at which hour the sun is supposed to have arisen today. George deals from the bottom of the deck under such like circumstances.

IN the first place both managers having decided to start the game with left-handed pitchers—Gervais and Sallee—in the box, Huggins put Cather in right field in place of Jimmy Sheckard, who is a left-handed hitter. For the same reason Stallings placed Wilson Collins, the Vanderbilt University kid, in left field, because Joe Connolly, the regular left-gardener, is a left-handed batter.

WHEN Stallings guessed that Lefty Gervais needed help and sent Rudolph in right handed in to relieve him in the fourth inning, Huggins guessed after took a guess and slowed in Sheckard to bat for Cather. That worked all right, for Jimmy—who is one of the very best walters in the baseball—got a pass, and eventually scored a tieing run. And thereafter he played right field

IT was Stallings' next guess, and it proved a real conjecture, being more methodical than a guess. This came in the fifth inning. With the score a tie, one down, Maranville on third and Myers on first, the Boston manager sent Fred Mitchell up to bat for Collins. Mitch ran out 'em to left field with the best of them

After giving Hap Myers time to steal second base (Hap went down on the first ball) Mitchell drove a sacrifice fly to left which scored the "Rabbit" and put Boston one run ahead for the time being.

MANN opened the last of the sixth with a two-base drive along the left field foul line. Huggins' top piece began to whirl again, and his mind evolved the conjecture that Sallee was about all in, so he ordered him to the stable, and trotted Hannon out to stem the tide. It was a bad guess, for Rudolph scored the runner with a single

WE now come to the next guess. This was in the seventh, when Boston, with one down, had men on second and third. Huggins guessed that it would be best to pass Tipin and lay for Mann. So they pitched four balls one to "Silent John," and he ambled to first, chewing the sweet end of fancy and a toothpick.

It was Stallings' turn to guess, but this time it was hardly a guess, it was more of a surmise. Being floating and visionary, not to say sinister. What he did was to sneak Jay Kirke in to bat for Adam George had visions of a home run over the right field fence. Jay took one, fouled one, missed one, flung his bat angrily on the grass and then walked back to the bench without once looking up in the grand stand

HUGGINS took the final guess, but it proved even worse than a surmise. Wingo went in to pinch hit for Harmon. He made Jay Kirke's attempt look like a three-base hit, for all he could do was to foul one ball and he allowed the third strike to be called on him

That closed the guessing contest for the day, with Stallings on top of the heap

ONCE more we tip hat to Walter Maranville. The "Rabbit" started a lightning double-play in the ninth that caused the fans to cheer lustily, while Rudolph breathed a hearty sigh of relief. Mance led off with a sharp single. He was likely hit at that, for he went after a ball no higher than his shoelaces. But it put him on next. Jot Dobbs came, and that's what counts in baseball. The next man slashed a sharp grounder over second base that looked as safe as yesterday. But the midget got to it just in time and, tumbling second, retiring Mance, he whipped the ball to Myers for the second out. Konetzny, the last man up, was ordered out on strikes, and the Boston Nationals had put another game under their belts.

MARANVILLE knocked out a dandy three-bagger in the fifth, scoring two men and putting Boston right in the running. He caught one on the end of his 2 x 4 bat and drove it to the extreme right-hand corner of the lot. The ball rolled right up close to the corner pocket and stayed there until a fielder picked it up. This hit tied the score when it looked like the game was drifting away.

Pilgrims After Fifth Place Lord Will Strengthen Them

By L. R. MURDOCH.

By means of a game battered out of St. Louis and Philadelphia a eleven in hitting defeat of Portsmouth, the plucky and determined bunch led by George Stallings are in sixth place today, and are only one and one half games behind the Giants, who are holding down fifth place. Playing with the skill and persistence with which they struck their winning gait and have held it, they should make a serious bid for a berth considerably higher in the world than they occupy today.

Stallings believes, too that he has strengthened his somewhat shaky and unsettled outfield by the acquisition of Berthe Lord, who joined him today. Lord appears for the first time in a National League uniform.

The big outfielder, who helped Connie Mack win the world's championship in 1911, and who participated in some other big triumphs of the Athletics, used to be a big hitter, and had plenty of speed. Last year he went back, and was finally let out to Baltimore, which is a sort of asylum for ex-Philadelphia Athletics. His record shows that he played in a total of 81 games was at bat 378 times, scored sixty-three runs, and made ninety-five hits, of which twelve were two baggers and nine three baggers. He made twelve sacrifice hits and stole fifteen bases. His batting average was .256, which, of course, is too low for a big league outfielder. still that was only four points behind Harry Hooper's hitting record for 1912.

The year before that, however when the Athletics won the American League pennant and the world's championship Lord batted for .310. In that season, when he played in 134 games, was at bat 374 times, scored ninety-two runs, made the .370 hits, of which thirty-seven were doubles, eleven triples and two home runs. He sacrificed seventeen times, and stole fifteen bases. In that season, too, his batting run close to Harry Hooper's. Lord being one point behind the Sox right fielder. In 1911 Lord led off the Athletic batting order. He usually played left field.

Stallings is amply equipped with pitchers, particularly in number so he could well spare "Rebel" McTigue for the chance of picking up a promising outfielder. McTigue joined the Baltimore team in Buffalo today.

Stallings expected to use Lord in the line up today. His intention was to put him in left field, so that Mann, the new comer to big league company, would be between two vets. Lewis and Lord. Connolly is a promising young outfielder and so is Mann. But neither can yet acquired the necessary big league experience. Still, the use of Lord is largely experimental.

Notwithstanding, Lord was sent to the minors by Mack late last season, it was partly because the Athletics had taken on two young outfielders, F. Murphy and Walsh both of whom promised to "make good" that Lord was not held to see if he would "come back." JOHNSON NEAR PITCHING RECORD

The fury stalling that Walter Johnson had created a short out record for consecutive innings and was within three and one third innings of the record of Jack White of the Chicago Nationals would be interesting if true

Unfortunately for part of the story is that Johnson has pitched fifty two and two third innings without allowing a run over the plate. The Washington speed demon has not held the record, which is credited to "Jack" Coombs of the Philadelphia Athletics, who pitched fifty three consecutive innings in 1910. However, Johnson has an excellent chance to set a new mark in his next game

The record credited to "Doc" White of fifty three consecutive innings without crossing the home plate is short. The record is fairly significant, as the [illegible] with it [illegible] Young [illegible] Cy [illegible] when New York failed to [illegible] in the eighth inning, and did not [illegible] the ninth.

GARSON'S comment as [illegible] heard was uttered with his [illegible] himself in [illegible]

"Well, I'm [illegible] anyway!" Mary de[illegible] "I don't half [illegible]

"And I appreciate that hat," was the reply, with a dry chuckle.

M[illegible] announced. There was a smile on the face of the maid as she explained a minute later that, in accordance with her mistress' order the visitor was shown into the drawing room, for his presence was of an elegance so extraordinary as to attract attention anywhere—and with as well from a bald sheperge.

Meantime, Garson had explained to Mary:

"It's English Eddie—you met him once I wonder what he wants? Probably got a trick from me. We often used to work together."

"Nothing without my consent," Mary warned.

"Oh, no, no, sure not!" Garson agreed.

Further discussion was cut short by the appearance of English Eddie himself, a tall, handsome man in the early thirties, who paused just within the doorway and delivered to Mary a bow that was the perfection of elegance. Mary made no effort to restrain the smile caused by the costume of Mr. Grigge. Yet there was no violation of the canons of good taste except in the aggregate. From spats to hat, from walking coat to gloves, everything was perfect of its kind. Only there was an over-elaboration, so that the ensemble was flamboyant. And the man's manners precisely harmonized with his clothes, wherefor the whole effect was emphasized and rendered bizarre. Garson took one amazed look and then rocked with laughter

Grinned in Sympathy

Grigge regarded his former associate reproachfully for a moment and then grinned in frank sympathy.

"Really, Mr. Grigge, you quite overcome me," Mary said, half apologetically

The visitor cast a self satisfied glance over his garb.

"I think it's rather neat, myself." He had some reputation in the underworld for his manner of dressing, but he regarded this latest achievement as his masterpiece

"Sure some duds!" Garson admitted, checking his merriment

"From your costume," Mary suggested, "one might judge that this is purely a social call. Is it?"

"Well, not exactly," Grigge answered, with a smile

"No I fancied," his hostess replied "So, sit down, please, and tell us all about it."

While she was speaking, Garson went to the various doors, and made sure that all were shut, then took a seat in the chair near that which Grigge occupied by the desk, so that the three were close together, and could speak softly

English Eddie wasted no time in getting to the point

"Now, look here," he said, rapidly "I've got the greatest game in the world. * * * Two years ago, a set of diotble tapestries, worth three hundred thousand dollars and a set of Fragonard panels, worth nearly as much more, were plucked from a chateau in France and smuggled into this country."

"I have never heard of that," Mary said, with some interest.

"No," Grigge replied. "You naturally wouldn't, for the simple reason that it's been kept on the dead quiet."

"Are them things really worth that much?" Garson exclaimed.

"Sometimes more," Mary answered. "Morgan has a set of Gothic tapestries worth—half a million dollars."

Garson uttered an ejaculation of disgust.

"He pays half a million dollars for a set of rags!" There was a note of fiercest bitterness come into his voice as he sarcastically concluded: "And they wonder at crime!"

"Can't Squeal"

Grigge went on with his account

"About a month ago, the things I was telling you of were hung in the library of a millionaire in the city." He hitched his chair a little closer to the desk, and leaned forward, lowering his voice almost to a whisper as he stated his plan. "Let's go after them. They were smuggled, mind you, and no matter what happens, he can't squeal. What do you say?"

Garson shot a piercing glance at Mary

"It's up to her," he said. Grigge regarded Mary eagerly, as she sat with eyes downcast. Then, after a little interval had elapsed in silence, he spoke interrogatively:

"Well?"

Grigge would have argued the matter, "I don't see any easier way to get half a million," he said aggressively.

Mary, however, was unimpressed.

"If it were fifty millions, it would make no difference. It's against the law"

"Oh, I know all that, of course," Grigge returned impatiently "But if you can—"

Mary interrupted him in a tone of finality.

"My friends and I never do anything that's illegal!" Thank you for coming to us, Mr. Grigge, but we can't go in, and there's an end of the matter"

"But wait a minute," English Eddie expostulated, "you see this chap, Glider, is—"

Mary's manner changed from indifference to sudden keen interest

"Glider?" she exclaimed, questioningly.

"Yes. You know who he is," Grigge answered; "the drygoods man."

Garson in his turn showed a new excitement as he bent toward Mary

"Why, it's old Glider, the man you owe—"

Mary, however, had regained her self-control, for a moment rudely shaken, and now her voice was tranquil again as she replied.

"I know. But, just the same, it's illegal, and I won't touch it. That's all there is to it."

Grigge was dismayed.

"But half a million!" he exclaimed, disconsolately. "There's a stake worth playing for. Think of it!" He turned pleadingly to Garson. "Half a million, Joe!"

Half a Million

The forger repeated the words with an inflection that was gloating.

"Half a million!"

"And it's the softest thing you ever saw!"

The telephone at the desk rang, and Mary spoke into it for a moment, then rose and excused herself to resume the conversation over the wire more privately in the booth. The instant she was out of the room Grigge turned to Garson anxiously

"It's a cinch, Joe," he pleaded. "I've got a pair of the loose." He drew a paper from his breast-pocket, and handed it to the forger, who seized it avidly and studied it with intent, avaricious eyes "It looks easy," Garson agreed, as he gave back the paper.

"It is easy," Grigge reiterated. "What do you say?"

Garson shook his head in refusal, but there was no conviction in the act.

"I promised Mary never to——"

Grigge broke in on him.

"But a chance like this! Anyhow, come around to the back room at Blinker's tonight, and we'll have a talk. Will you?"

"What time?" Garson asked hesitatingly tempted.

"Make it early, say nine," was the answer. "Will you?"

"I'll come," Garson replied, half-gullibly. And in the same moment Mary re-entered.

Grigge rose and spoke with an air of regret.

"It's 'follow the leader,'" he said, "and since you are against it, that settles it"

"Yes, I'm against it," Mary said, firmly.

"I'm sorry," English Eddie rejoined. "But we must all play the game as we see it. * * * Well, that was the business I was after, and, as it's finished, why, good afternoon, Miss Turner." He nodded toward Joe, and took his departure.

Something of what was in his mind was revealed in Garson's first speech after Grigge' going.

"That's a mighty big stake he's playing for."

"And a big chance he's taking!" Mary retorted. "No, Joe, we don't want any of that. We'll play a game that's safe and sure."

The words recalled to the forger weird forebodings that had been troubling him throughout the day.

"It's sure enough," he stated, "but is it safe?"

Mary looked up quickly

"What do you mean?" she demanded.

Garson walked to and fro nervously as he answered.

"I [illegible] those bulls get tired of you putting it over on 'em and try some rough work?"

Mary smiled carelessly

"Don't worry, Joy," she advised, "I know a way to stop it."

"Well, so far as that goes, so do I," the forger said, with significant emphasis. "Just what do you mean by that?" Mary demanded, suspiciously.

"For rough work," he said, "I have this." He took a magazine pistol from his pocket. It was of an odd shape, with a barrel longer than is usual and a bell-shaped contrivance attached to the muzzle.

"No, no, Joe!" Mary cried, greatly discomposed. "None of that—ever!"

The forger smiled, and there was malignant triumph in his expression

"Pooh!" he exclaimed. "Even if I used it, they would never get on to me. See this?" He pointed at the strange contrivance on the muzzle.

Mary's curiosity made her forget for a moment her distaste.

"What is it?" she asked, interestedly. "I have never seen anything like that before."

"Of course you haven't," Garson answered with much pride. "I'm the first man in the business to get one, and I'll bet on it. I keep up with the times." For once, he was revealing that fundamental egotism which is the characteristic of all his kind. "That's one of the new Maxim silencers," he continued, "With smokeless powder in the cartridges and the silencer on I can make a shot from my coat-pocket, and you wouldn't even know it had been done. * * * And I'm some shot, believe me."

"Impossible!" Mary ejaculated.

"No, it ain't," the man asserted. "Here, wait, I'll show you."

"Good gracious, not here!" Mary exclaimed in alarm. "We would have the whole place down on us."

Garson chuckled.

"You just watch that dinky little vase on the mantel across the room there. Tain't very valuable, is it?"

"No," Mary answered.

"I'll make it vamish, while still her eyes were on the vase, it fell in a cascade of shivered glass on the table and floor. She had heard no sound, she saw no smoke. Perhaps, there had been a faintest clicking noise. She was not sure. She stared dumfounded for a few seconds, then turned her bewildered face toward Garson, who was grinning in high enjoyment.

"I wouldn't have believed it possible," she declared, vastly impressed.

"Great little thing, ain't it?" the man asked, exultantly.

"Where did you get it?" Mary asked

"In Boston last week. And between you and me, Mary, it's the only model, and it sure is a corker for crime."

Further assertion of ideas made Mary shudder, but she said no more. She would have shuddered again, if she could have guessed the vital part that pistol was destined to play. But she had no thought of any actual peril to come from it. Had she but have known otherwise, could she have known of the meeting that night in the back room of Blinker's, two English Eddie and Garson sat with their heads close together over a table.

"Well," he urged, "what do you say?"

"How would we split it?" It was plain that Garson had given over the struggle against greed. After all, Mary was only a woman, despite her cleverness, and with the woman's timidity. Here was spoon for men.

"Three ways would be right," Grigge answered. "One to me, one to you and one to be divided up among the others."

Garson brought his first down on the table with a force that made the glasses jiggle.

"You're on," he said, strongly.

"Fine!" Grigge declared, and the two men shook hands. "Now, I'll get my own men. Chicago Red is in town. So is Dacey, with perhaps a couple of others of the right sort. I'll get them to meet you at Blinkey's at two tomorrow afternoon, and, if it looks right, we'll turn the trick tomorrow night."

"That's the stuff," Grigge agreed, greatly pleased

But a sudden shadow fell on the face of Garson. He bent closer to his companion, and spoke with a fierce intensity that brooked no denial.

"She must never know."

Grigge nodded understandingly.

"Of course," he answered. "I give you my word that I'll never tell her. And you know you can trust me, Joe."

"Yes," the forger replied soberly, "I know I can trust you." But the shadow did not lift from his face.

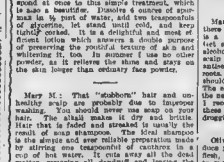
Safe Hints

When cane bottom seats sag, sponge both sides of the cane with hot soapsuds in which a handful of salt has been dissolved, then stand the chair in the open air. Treated like this the seats will become as firm as when new, shrinking into place.

When rinsing flannels and woolens it is best to do so in warm soapy water, as pure warm water makes them hard; also, when hanging curtains out to dry, hang them double, as it makes them even, and prevents them getting torn so easily.

To remove paint from clothing, mix equal parts of turpentine and ammonia, and apply the solution to the spots with a piece of cloth the same color as the garment. Rub gently the way of the nap until the paint is removed; then sponge the place with warm water and a little soap



The Home Beauty Parlor
by Betty Dean

Myrtle H: Perhaps it is the face powder you use which is causing your complexion trouble. Many women do this by clogging the pores and preventing natural circulation. Don't worry. Your skin will probably respond at once to this simple treatment, which is also a beautifier. Dissolve 4 ounces of powdered borax in 1 pint of water, add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine, let stand until cold, and keep tightly corked. It is a delightful and most efficient lotion which answers a double purpose in that it removes the powder particles of dirt and whitening it, too. In summer I use no other powder, and it relieves the shine and stays on the skin longer than ordinary face powder.

Mary M.: That "stubborn" hair and unhealthy scalp are probably due to improper washing. You should never use soap on your hair, but instead, if it is dry and brittle. Hair that is faded and streaked is usually the result of soap shampoos. The ideal shampoo is the simple and ever reliable preparation made by stirring one teaspoonful of ammonia in a cup of hot water. It cuts away all the dead matter, removing all dandruff and leaving the hair soft, fluffy and lustrous. If your hair is thin, get a good tonic from your druggist. It makes a splendid tonic.

Nettie G.: For your wrinkles there is no better remedy than this simple home-made one. It will support and strengthen the muscles of the face and eyes, heal, stimulate and smooth the skin. Obtain from the druggist an ounce of alcozoin, dissolve in ½ pint of cold water and add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine. Stir briskly and let stand over night. Rub the preparation into the skin night and morning. It is a splendid preventive of blackheads and rough "muddy" spots. Be careful to use a good powder for which see answer to Myrtle H, and keep the blood and system clean (see answer to Cora K.).

Cora K.: With spring fever come complexion troubles. You must purify your blood before you can help the skin much by external applications. Tone up your system with a good blood tonic to remove the cause of that sallowness. I highly recommend the following reliable, home-made preparation: Get ½ pint alcohol and 1 ounce kardene. Dissolve kardene in the alcohol, put in ½ cup sugar and add enough water to make a full quart. Take a tablespoonful of this before each meal. It will aid your digestion, make the liver active and clear your blood of the poisons that are spoiling your complexion.

Mary S.: When the ends of the hair are split there is usually trouble with the scalp. Here is a fine recipe for a home-made hair tonic: Get an ounce of quinozin, dissolve in ½ pint of alcohol and ½ pint water. This removes scalp health and prevents dandruff. It is an antiseptic and stimulates the vitality of the roots. If your hair is losing its fresh color, you should restore it at once with this treatment. The effect should be all you need to bring back the natural shade and a lustrous, glossy growth. I recommend, also, frequent shampoos. For these you should use only cantheus. Ask your druggist for these items.

Olive: You are right in taking steps to remove that mouth. There is a remedy for excess flesh, easily prepared at home, which I am glad to suggest to anyone who sees her figure and good looks threatened by fat. Dissolve 4 ounces of saxolite in ½ pint hot water and take one tablespoonful three times daily. This treatment does not call for exercises or martyrdom of any kind. It simply checks a tendency to obesity, leaving the body healthy and there is no shrinking of tissues of the skin.

Molly: It is not likely that you need glasses. You may be nervous and your eyes feel the effects. By the use of a cheap, home-made tonic you can easily get back that brightness which you say "she" used to rave about. It means much to you, so I'll give you for an ounce of cyrsius. Dissolve it in a pint of soft water and drop two drops of the solution in each eye. If the lids are red use it two or three times daily. To make your eyes strong and beautiful, put a little of the solution on slabs of cotton, and lay them over the eyes and lie down for a few minutes.

Clarissa: Yes, there are many so-called "skin reducers" made, but I cannot recommend any special one. For flesh-reduction see reply to Olive.

The Return of Grandmother's Hat

Described by Olivette, the Boston American's Fashion Expert

THE hat of grandmother's day is with us again, with all the charm of modern improvements.

The dainty bit of midsummer millinery shown in the picture on the bottom tilts over soft hair and roguish eyes most effectively.

If you have an old leghorn, cut it down and bind the edge of the brim with wide shadow or burgundy lace.

Tilt the hat to the proper angle with one of the "halos" we have so long discarded and bank the flat crown with forgetmenots or any dainty little flower.

Here and there a wee bunch of roses in contrasting color add an effective touch, and the soft taffeta streamers pendant from beneath the brim sound the final note of becomingness and following the latest Parisian fancy.

The top picture shows a fetching model developed in black milan, with a tiny cord of pale gray satin at the edge of the slightly rolled brim.

At the left of the back are two graceful, long-rounded plumes of uncurled ostrich.

Black satin ribbon tied in a loose knot holds the brim in front, encircles the sloping crown and falls in two "follow-me-lads" streamers from the even loops of a large bow directly at the base of the plumes in the centre of the back.

In these days of bright coloring the home milliner may copy this becoming hat at small expense if she owns two feathers long enough because of the popularity of black and white.

Little Bobbie's Pa

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

PA took me fishing trout yesterday. It was a beautiful day when we started out & Pa sed it was just the kind of a day to catch a lot of fish.

Doant you think you ought to take a guide, dearest, sed Ma. You know we are strangers to this neckshna & you mite no be abel to find the right places to fish. My father used to always talk a guide with him wen he went fishing in a strange country. He was always afrade that he mite git lost.

There is no danger of your losing me that easy, said Pa. Doant you worry about that.

I know there is no chanst to lose you, sed Ma, but I shud hate to lose little Boobie. Please talk a guide.

There is no danger around this open country, sed Pa, we doant need a guide, cum on, Bobbie. Doant forgit to bang onto that touch. We will need it by noon.

He Got Tired

After we had walked for about two hours I began to git kind of tired & I cud see that Pa was gitting tired too.

How far is this stream? I asked Pa. I doant want to walk all day. It cant be very much further, said Pa. The man at the hotel told us to keep walking thru this patch of hard wood, due North, till we came to a big pine tree & then to go about two miles thrue a spruce patch until we came to the trout stream. Bobbie, sed Pa, doant you hear a little trout stream purling anywhere?

No, I sed, & I am listening as hard as I can.

Doant you hear any kind of a stream purl at all? Sed Pa.

No, I sed, not any kind of a stream & I shut going to walk much further neither.

Then Pa beegan talking to me about ons thne wen he took sum frends along trout fishing in upper Misskican. They all thot I was lost, sed Pa. There was two ladies in the crowd & they was the bravest in the party. The men looked awful worried, sed Pa, they kep telling how we was up against it, but the ladies just kep on luffing & cheering thare husbands. They had perfect faith in me beekuss I bred one of them tell the other that I looked so self-reliant that she wud trust me anyware to keep peepul from danger. Yes, sed Pa, those ladies trusted me & thare faith in me was justified. Presently we cum to our destination, Pa sed, & the ladies sed they felt like hugging me.

I cud see that Pa was talking kind of absent-minded beekause all the time he was talking he kep looking around in the woods & I knew he dident know bis way.

Jest then Pa sed Bobbie, Bobbie I here it, I hear it. It is the sound of running water that I hear. Dident I tell you, Bobbie?

They Hear It

Sure enuff, I heard the running water, too, so both of us beegan to walk faster toward a clearing. After we git to the brook, Bobbie, sed Pa, we will arrange our tackel & go after the speckled duties.

Jest then we cum out into the clearing wars we had herd the running water & Pa & me nearly fell over. We was back to the littel hotel from wich we had started out from. We had went in a circel. Ma was setting on the porch grining at Pa, & the sound of the running water was water cumming from a hose. A hired man was washing he barn.

Now Ma calls Pa Izaak Walton.

What She Answered

HE was very rich, and, as usual in such cases, he was successful in love. At last the fair girl whom he sought he had found. She was bright and gay and frivolous and poor, and she loved the great world and its ways. Money was an object to her. There are many who do not differ from her very widely. The day for the wedding was set, and he began to grow a little careless. She did not, because she had always been so.

One day they quarrelled, and she said some things to him that set him to asking questions of his friends. Then he came again to see her. He was in a bad humor.

"So," he said harshly, "you are like most women!"

"I hope so," she replied, sharply.

He wasn't expecting that answer.

"Well, and what of it?" she questioned, with scorn.

"Everything," he said angrily; "you accepted me because I am rich, and are to marry me for my money."

It was a home thrust, and the girl blushed and hung her head. "Answer me," he commanded. "Answer me, I say. Would you marry me if I had no money?"

The girl's wilful spirit rose within her. "Good gracious, Mr. Cashinhand," she exclaimed, "you don't think I'd marry a man without one redeeming trait, do you?"

And Mr. C. was sorry he had not departed before he began.

Exclusive Oxford.

THE ignorance of the scholar concerning what is going on in the world round him is proverbial. But a story of Thackeray's own telling points to surprising possibilities of the cloistered life of Oxford, at least in the last century.

Thackeray, it seems, was to lecture at Oxford, and, according to custom, had first to get the Vice-Chancellor's license to do so. This is the conversation that ocurred, as the novelist reported it:

Vice-Chancellor—Pray, sir, what can I do for you?

Thackeray—My name is Thackeray.

Vice-Chancellor—So I see by your card.

Thackeray—I seek permission to lecture within your precincts.

Vice-Chancellor—Ah! you are a lecturer. What subjects do you undertake, religious or political?

Thackeray—Neither. I am a literary man.

Vice-Chancellor—Have you written anything?

Thackeray—Yes, I am the author of 'Vanity Fair.'"

Vice-Chancellor—I presume a Dissenter. Has that anything to do with John Bunyan's book?"

Thackeray—Not exactly. I have also written 'Pendennis.'"

Vice-Chancellor—Never heard of these works. But no doubt they are proper books."

Thackeray—I have also contributed to 'Punch.'"

Vice-Chancellor, "'Punch.' I have heard of that. Is it not a humorous publication?"

The Mistakes of Jennie

By Hal Coffman

Being a Series of Chapters in the Life of a City Girl

"But, no—mothers always ask so many questions."

CHAPTER III.

WHEN Jennie got in the house that night and found her mother waiting up for her with a nice little lunch and some good hot tea, she evaded her mother's look and questions, saying she was tired and had a headache—hurried upstairs to her room, where she could be alone and THINK.

Why had she so long put up with this sordid way of living—no good times, dresses or theatres, such as other girls have. All she ever did was to hurry down town to work every morning, a hurried little lunch with the other girls at noon and then back to work till evening, when she would hurry home to supper and then maybe to see some of her girl acquaintances or to the "movies" with girl and boy friends.

How shallow and sordid and monotonous it seemed to Jennie, who had just had dinner in one of the best cafes in town and came home in a taxicab for the first time.

What if she hadn't been introduced to the man and what difference did it make if her mother or father didn't know him or approve of him?

Hadn't he been just as nice and polite—a lot more so than some of the boy friends she knew—and hadn't he asked her to "call him up" the next day? But shouldn't she tell her mother all about the nice time she had that evening?—but no—mothers always asked so many questions—what if THE MAN was a great deal older than she—hadn't he told her that he had a little daughter just her age, but his family was away on a trip to Europe, and he was so lonesome since they were gone, and wouldn't she be his little pal and meet his wife and daughter when they arrived home—and she must bring her mother, too, when his family got back—no, it wouldn't do to tell her mother till then, for she might not understand it like he and Jennie did, and didn't she like him just a little bit?

All this Jennie thought out as she sat on the edge of the bed, absently braiding her hair in her nice, clean, plain, tidy little room, with her mother's picture, taken when she was about Jennie's age, sitting there on her little white bureau, looking right at her.

But Jennie went to sleep that night, thinking of a great big, bright restaurant, with its beautifully gowned women, heavenly music, thick carpet, and the "taxi" ride home that was so different from the pokey old street cars she was used to riding in.

She was sound asleep and didn't hear her mother noiselessly open the door and come in to see if there was anything she could do before she went to bed—or hear her murmur "poor little girl—if she just didn't HAVE to work so hard," as she went out.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

Keeping Up at Home

WHEN DAYSEY MAYME APPLETON returns to her little home town after extensive travel, the impressions made on her mind by foreign scenes and customs are so vivid that unconsciously they blot out the lifetime impressions of home life.

For instance: It was her privilege to make a curtsey before royalty when abroad, and she almost mindedly made a curtsey while ordering liver of the butcher after she got home.

"I got into the habit while abroad," she said apologetically, brushing the sawdust off her skirt when rising from the meat market floor.

For the same reason she put on her bathing suit when she engaged the bathroom; turned to the left when out driving, and climbed to the top of her father's automobile when starting for a ride.

"Travel is educational," she said in a deprecating tone, "but it is also confusing. It is quite a tax on my mind to remember when I am in the Ten Cent Store at home that I am not in the Hon Marche in Paris, and I catch myself addressing the girl clerks in French.

There was to be a family reunion to witness the christening of a new baby, and Daysey Mayme was invited.

She had spent the morning in writing of her impressions of a city on the coast; its big naval yards, it battleships, cosmopolite, etc., and her mind was filled with reminiscences of her visit as she dressed for the party.

She had started out the door when she recalled the occasion that was calling the family together. A christening! She smiled in a happy reminiscent way as she hurried back to the dining room. A moment later she left the house with a brown paper parcel under her arm.

She was late! What if she should be too late! She quickened her steps and reached the parlor of her kin's home just in time. A little baby, with a red, wrinkled face, had been put into the arms of the preacher.

Daysey Mayme caught his arm with one hand while with the other she quickly tore the wrapping off her parcel.

"What is it?" he asked in amaze.

Language Curios

THE following are a few linguistic whimsicalities: The Germans call a thimble a "finger hat," which it certainly is, and a grasshopper a "hay horse." A glove with them is a "hand-shoe," showevidently that they wore shoes before gloves. Poultry is "feather cattle," While the names for the well-known substances oxygen and hydrogen are in their language "sour stuff," and "water stuff." The French, strange to say, have no term "to stand," nor can a Frenchman speak of "kicking" any one. The nearest approach a French makes to it in his politeness is to threaten to "give a blow with his foot"—the same thing to the recipient in either case, but it seems to want the directness, the energy, of our "kick." Neither has he any word for "baby," or for "home," or "comfort." The terms "upstairs" and "downstairs" are also unknown in French. The Hindus are said to have no word for "friend." The Italians have no equivalent for "humility."

EXPERIENCE OF MOTHERHOOD

Advice to Expectant Mothers

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

"There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of infant, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all this evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

In many homes once childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

All our testimonials are guaranteed genuine and truthful. The original of each came to us entirely unsolicited. They are sincere expressions of gratitude for actual benefits received from the medicine.

SENATE CONSIDERS BILL FOR PURE BUTTERMILK AND FOR PURE CREAM

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

The Senate today and tomorrow considers two bills calculated to improve the milk supply. In debate on one of these bills yesterday reference was made by Senator Brennan to the present epidemic in Canton, where fatalities has caused several deaths and many cases of illness, as a result of contaminated milk.

Because of this epidemic, the subject of milk legislation is of unusual interest at this time. The bill discussed this afternoon is a measure introduced by Mayor Fitzgerald, and suggested by Inspector James O. Jordan, Boston milk inspector. The bill simply aims to bring buttermilk and cream under the present laws forbidding the adulteration of milk.

The court has held the present laws do not apply to buttermilk or cream. Therefore, Inspector Jordan declares, many adulterants are being used in buttermilk and cream. Some of them are harmless, some deleterious, but most of them are perfectly legal.

It was undoubtedly the intention, when laws were passed forbidding the adulteration of milk, to forbid the use of preservatives, artificial color, artificial flavor, water, or condensed milk, in cream or buttermilk. But the court has held that the law did not accomplish the purpose.

The Senate yesterday considered this bill, which was reported adversely by the Committees on Agriculture and Public Health, sitting jointly. Senator Charles E. Ward of Buckland, chairman of this joint session, explained that at the time this bill came up for a hearing, it was late in the afternoon. He said:

"Should Stop Abuse."

"The committee offered to hear the friends of the bill at length on the following day, but those who were favoring the bill decided to present their case briefly at that time. The result was that all the facts regarding the bill were probably not laid before us. I do not believe the bill should be passed at this time, but I do hope the bill will be referred to the next General Court so that it may be discussed thoroughly at that time.

Senator Brennan urged that action should be taken at the present time. He said:

"I was in the House when this bill was passed. At that time, a representative gave a demonstration of the way in which the law could be evaded, and made milk, by mixing a white powder with water.

"Such adulterated milk is being sold today in certain places. We ought to stop that now. The seriousness of the milk situation has been shown in Canton, where illness and death have resulted from the contamination of the milk supply. Pure milk now are essential to protect the milk consumer and the consumer outnumbers the producer by many thousands. He should be heard.

Senator Charles F. McCarthy of Marlboro, who has fought for pure food laws throughout the session, moved that the action on the bill be postponed till today so that Senator Brennan could get all the facts in the matter, and this was done.

This bill is a wrong one, and should pass. I believe it will.

Tomorrow the Senate will consider the Meaney Bill, providing the labeling of bottles with the source and treatment of the milk they contain. This is an admirable measure. It forces the producer to tell the consumer the truth—to tell him what he is getting. I believe the ideal milk law—though it is utopian and impossible—would be to have every bottle of milk labelled with the name of the man on whose farm or at whose dairy it was produced. In that way, you would have ideal conditions—and every purchaser of a bottle of milk could go right to the farm where it was produced, if he wished, to examine conditions for himself.

It is not possible to reach this perfect condition. But Representative Meaney's bill comes close to it, by identifying "out of State" milk, and also by identifying "pasteurized" milk. This bill should be enacted, and I believe it will be.

Tomorrow also—and don't forget this—the Senate will consider the glucose-in-candy bill. Glucose is a cheap adulterant, a chemical and not a natural product of corn. It is chiefly more dangerous to a child's digestion than is cane sugar—which should be used in candy. Glucose in other foods must be declared to be present—under Federal laws. Glucose in candy should also be declared. I hope the glucose-in-candy bill also will be enacted.

MEXICO RECOGNIZED BY TWO POWERS

MEXICO CITY, May 13.—Letters from President Poincare of France and King George of England, conveying official recognition of the Mexican government, were presented to President Huerta at the National Palace today. Letters of recognition from the governments of Belgium, Germany and Italy are expected soon. Resentment because of the refusal of the United States to recognize the present government is growing apace.

NEW HAVEN ROAD SHOWS NET LOSS

NEW YORK, May 13.—The quarterly report of the New Haven, published here, shows a decrease of $1,081,927 in net earnings.

MELLEN KNOWS NOTHING ABOUT PENN. CONTROL

is the Pennsylvania Railroad seeking to acquire control of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad?

That is the question that was discussed in railroad and financial circles today.

"I know nothing whatever about it," declared President Charles S. Mellen today at the South Station.

The belief that the Pennsylvania is trying to get possession of the New Haven was inspired by heavy sales of New Haven stock since the first disclosure of the New Haven financing methods.

It is believed that the Pennsylvania line, which already is the largest single shareholder in the New Haven road, with 40,625 shares, seeks control in a movement against the old enemy, the New York Central, with confidence inspired by the low price of the stock and the death of J. Pierpont Morgan.

DRAPER STRIKERS SEE STATE BOARD ON NEW DEMANDS

A committee of seven, representing the strikers at the Draper Mills at Hopedale, came to Boston today to present the strikers' revised demands to the Board of Conciliation and Arbitration at the State House.

Rumors of a serious clash between the strike leaders at Hopedale following the split between Joseph M. Coldwell, the Socialist, and Overseer Frank Swift and Caleb E. Howard of the I. W. W. were circulated today when Coldwell declared he would hold a meeting in Lincoln square, Hopedale, Thursday night.

Ettor and Giovannitti had previously announced their intention of speaking at an I. W. W. meeting in Lincoln square the same night and the police are preparing for trouble. Coldwell was the only strike leader in evidence about Hopedale today and there were no demonstrations.

CHILDREN'S FRIEND PERISHED FIGHTING FOREST FLAMES

FALL RIVER—May 13.—The charred body of Frank Shepherd was found today in the track of the forest fire that is still raging in the Copicut section. Shepherd was known and liked by all the children of this vicinity, as for years he has driven the 'bus carrying children to school from the outlying districts. Yesterday he answered a call for fire fighters. After several hours of hard work, the men became separated. He was not seen alive again.

MISS AGNES WILSON TO LOSE FAT JOB

WASHINGTON, May 13.—Miss Agnes Wilson, daughter of Secretary of Labor Wilson, is one of the House employes who probably will be dropped from the government payroll when the reorganization of the committees is effected. Miss Wilson is still secretary to the Committee on Labor, although her father left the Department of Labor March 4. Miss Wilson is still drawing a salary at the rate of $2,000 a year and will do so until June.

OLDEST G. A. R. VETERAN IS 101

SKOWHEGAN, Me., May 13.—Benjamin Priest, said to be the oldest Civil War veteran in the country, celebrated his 101st birthday in his home in Canaan, working the greater part of the day planting his garden. Mr. Priest is still in good health and exhibits all his faculties. He was allowed to enlist, although past the regular age, because of his strong physique.

TODAYS STOCK MARKET

There was not much change in stock markets at the opening. Trading was dull and uncertainty was a dominant feature. Locally there was very little range to prices. Boston & Maine receded a fraction and New Haven was unchanged. Copper stocks were sluggish. United Fruit declined.

When the forenoon was half over in New York, Amalgamated, Steel and both Harrimans were profitably higher, while Canadian Pacific and Reading showed small losses.

"The basis of the Japanese protest against the proposed California legislation," Thompson, Towle & Co. say, "is unlikely to stimulate any interest materially. The situation is not regarded as at all serious."

All reports indicate that the copper metal market is to be quiet for a time and there were encouraging orders received by sales from Europe this morning.

New York Irregular at Start.

The New York market was irregular at the start, with Jersey Central going down a point because of the threatened suit by the government against Reading. When Jersey Central fell to 226, it was down 25 points since Saturday and 100 points since April last year.

Some stocks were up at the opening. Amalgamated being 1/4 higher. It soon lost the gain. Southern Pacific opened similarly, commencing with a gain of 3/8, but losing it and making a fractional decline within half an hour. Virginia-Carolina Chemical, which has been under pressure for some time, lost 5/4. Union Pacific commenced at 149 3/8, lost a fractional gain but soon declined, losing 1/8. Canadian Pacific was one point down at first, strong in London on opening reports. American Can, New Haven & Northern Pacific gained fractionally. Union Pacific opened at 150, exchanged from Monday. Pennsylvania Railroad shaded 3/4. Erie lost the same amount.

The Curb was steady.

London Copper Quotations.

After a three-days' recess, due to holiday celebration, the London copper warrants market reopened this morning with a firm tone. Spot was up 5s. and futures 6s. 3d.

The asking price of electrolytic is steady at 157, cents a pound, and while consumers are hesitating about ordering beyond July position, a total of 16-cent copper as being a question of days only. It is believed by many in the trade that as soon as foreign buying is resumed the price will be advanced.

The Ray Consolidated operating profits for the first quarter of this year are reported at as $878,874. The total net profits are given as $1,082,625. These earnings are based upon the pound price of 15.1545 cents for copper. During the quarter production was 12,300,000 pounds, compared with 10,490,661 in the 1912 quarter.

The April output of the Calumet and Arizona smelter was 4,500,000 pounds of blister copper, against a production of 4,250,000 pounds in March this year and 4,104,000 in April last year.

President Wilson Wobbling.

It is wired from Washington: "President Wilson is beginning to wobble on the subject of free sugar and free raw wool.

"Letters, telegrams and petitions from all over the West have been pouring in upon him declaring that his policy on these two items means ruination.

"Senators Newlands, Chamberlain and Walsh have advised the President what the political effect of placing these articles on the free list will be.

"The President has begun to listen to their plea because of political expediency. If the success of the machine the President is upbuilding is threatened by free sugar and wool, he will not hesitate to say that amendments may be adopted on the floor. In this way the President will be the man upon whom thus far have followed his dictation on tariff matters will save their faces. Word has been circulated beginning to change his mind was brought to the Capitol today by one of the most prominent Democrats in Congress."

Sulzer Signs Three Bills.

Governor Sulzer has signed three bills of importance to the New York Stock Exchange. They are all reform measures. One makes it a felony to make false statements or advertisements concerning securities or the financial standing of a corporation, company or association.

The second makes it a felony to report or publish fictitious transactions in securities with intent to deceive.

Financial News in Brief.

For the first quarter, of this year Boston & Maine reports an increase in total operating revenue of $638,025 and an increase in total operating expenses of $1,194,260, while the net operating revenue decreased $556,235. The gain in outside net was $4,877 and the total net revenue decreased $540,848. The operating income decreased $371,452. Taxes increased $30,604.

Bond issues backed by Rothschilds, Kuhn, Loeb & Co. and Speyer & Co. seem to fall flat upon the market, but Hayden, Stone & Co. find no trouble in marketing "a million dollars' worth of Gaston, Gay Company preferred stock almost over night.

A newspaper describes the condition of the market by quoting a New York broker as saying: "My physician has ordered me to take the rest cure, so I visit the board every day."

Standard Oil of Nebraska has declared a stock dividend of 25 per cent, besides the regular semi-annual cash dividend of $10 a share and an extra cash dividend of $5 a share.

The decrease of Virginia-Carolina Chemical common and preferred to new low records for five years is thought by some speculators to foreshadow a reduction in dividend rates.

There is no little money being made in Wall Street now that tenants in that famous district are clamoring for lower rents.

Times seem out of joint when sane investment stocks as New Haven, Pennsylvania, Jersey Central, Northern Pacific and American Telephone steadily sag and speculative issues like Steel, Amalgamated, Union Pacific and Reading, of which there is always a large floating supply, get enough support to keep them above the low of the year.

It is expected in New York that $4,000,000 more in gold will be engaged shortly for shipment to Paris.

The April decrease in unfilled tonnage shows that the United States Steel Corporation received during that month orders at a per diem rate of nearly 19,000 tons below shipments.

The New York sub-treasury gained $702,000 from the banks yesterday and has gained $3,922,000 since Friday.

GARDNER'S FIGHT HALTS ORGANIZING OF G. O. P. BOARD

WASHINGTON, May 13.—House Republican leaders in the Democratic, as well as trouble over the proposed reorganization of the Congressional campaign committee, and it has been practically decided that no further attempts will be made to perfect the working machine for a month or more. The chairmanship of Congressman Gardner of Massachusetts to become "the Progressive" chairman of the new committee is a thorn in the side of the "stand pat" element, and Mr. Gardner's friends have a suspicion that many of the regulars remained away and broke a quorum when reorganization was recently attempted. It has now been decided not to call the Republicans together until the middle of June. In the meantime Mr. Gardner is waging an aggressive campaign. The Massachusetts Republican says he will "liberalize" the committee if he becomes chairman.

HEY! ANTHONY! — REAL 'SEPTEMBER MORN' AT YALE

NEW HAVEN, Ct., May 13.—The unique spectacle of a Yale senior clothed only in nature's garb cavorting around the Yale campus is a matter today receiving the attention of the Yale faculty. Clarence Beers, a local boy, who is attending Yale, was the man who unwillingly took part in the "altogether." To the accident on of his classmates and others on the campus.

The other member of the class repeated the action later, but his name escaped public notice.

Both students were victims of classmates. The spectacle was an informal part of the Omega Lambda Chi initiation.

FORBES SAYS THAT CAPITAL NEEDS A REST

By B. C. FORBES.

Business Editor of the American.

The world has run short of capital. Governments, States, municipalities, railroads, utility companies, industrial corporations, shipping concerns, exploitation companies, manufacturers, merchants and the people-at-large have tried to borrow too rapidly. Their ambitions have outdistanced their purses.

A halt has been called—not by the borrowers, but by lenders all over the world.

The investment market needs a rest. It has been overworked. It must have time to recuperate.

Never before has there been witnessed such a succession of flat failures and semi-failures in the flotation of important securities. Conditions today have become impossible. The greatest banking houses and institutions in the world have been humiliated by financial difficulties. The Rothschilds were left with more than $500,000,000 of $55,000,000 Brazilian bonds they offered; Kuhn, Loeb & Co. nobly subjugated the market for $30,000,000 of 5½ per cent. bonds. Speyer & Co. did better with $19,000,000 Missouri, Kansas & Texas notes, but the result was not an unqualified success, while J. P. Morgan & Co. shrank from venturing to offer a huge block of Interboro bonds under the existing demoralized conditions.

London Market Off.

Look at what has happened in the London market:

	Offered.	Taken.
Brazilian 5's	$55,000,000	$1,500,000
City of Edmonton 5's	$2,500,000	$1,000,000
Grand Trunk Pacific 4's	$10,000,000	$2,000,000
Madras & S. Mahratta 4's	$12,500,000	$1,250,000
Madeira Mamore 5's	$5,000,000	$1,000,000
New South Wales 4's	$15,000,000	$2,500,000
State of Bahia 5's	$7,500,000	$750,000
Union of So. Africa 4's	$15,000,000	$500,000
Western Australia 4's	$10,000,000	$1,000,000
Totals	$155,500,000	$13,008,000

Unsold balance $142,492,000.

The German government tasted the bitterness of failure when last it entered the market for money. France has been putting off borrowing owing to the unresponsive attitude of investors. Japan had to pay through the nose for temporary funds, and the outcome of the long pending $125,000,000 Chinese loan remains to be seen.

New York city will offer $45,000,000 4½ per cent. bonds this day week. All will be taken, no doubt, but the price is not expected to reach one point above par, despite the present high interest rate. More than half a hundred American municipalities could not find buyers for bonds at 6 per cent. each, a decade or so ago. Makeshift borrowing reveals itself in the sum obtained by permanent loans.

Pennsylvania Railroad shares fell to the lowest point reached since the panic days and other high grade stocks, railroad and industrial, are similarly situated. Is it not the end to be? Are interest rates to rise and rise and prices to decline and decline? I do not think so.

1,200 IN HORSE PARADE.

The entries for the Memorial Day work-horse parade number almost 1,200, being about fifty more than last year's entries.

TESTIMONY OF LITTLE GIRL FREES TWO MEN OF MURDER CHARGE

The testimony of pretty nineteen-year-old Adelina Marjay, No. 15 Mercer street, South Boston, convinced Judge Fallon today that the charge of murder brought against Thomas F. Kinsella and John V. Fitzgerald, two youths of twenty-one years, was unfounded. The judge dismissed the case.

Their arrest grew out of a fight in a saloon which resulted in the death of Michael McDonough, thirty-two years old, of No. 411 Second street. Kinsella, who lives at No. 481 First street, and Fitzgerald, whose home is at No. 390 Second street, got into an argument with McDonough. A fight followed. Little Miss Marjay had been visiting with a family who lives over the saloon. She saw the whole affair. She testified today that the fight was all over and that McDonough was returning to the saloon when a young fellow in black stepped up behind McDonough and knocked him down. The police are searching for the young man in black.

BOSTON AMERICAN

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, MAY 13, 1913.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

The Killing of Men, Women and Children by RECKLESS Auto Drivers Will Not Stop Until the Courts Begin to Put the Guilty Parties in Jail

Since the AMERICAN last criticised the leniency of the lower courts towards persons who put human life in jeopardy by reckless use of automobiles, the grim work of manslaughter has steadily proceeded.

Yesterday the same District Court in Cambridge, whose lenient treatment of an automobile driver charged with manslaughter had attracted the AMERICAN'S attention and caused it to investigate the number of accidents happening daily through the misconduct of those in charge of the cars, fined $100 a man named Lockwood who was accused of reckless driving and with being under the influence of liquor while operating his car, and who drove his car into the rear of another automobile, hurling four people to the earth.

Section 22 of Chapter 534 of the Acts of 1909 PERMIT THE COURT to impose the SENTENCE OF IMPRISONMENT upon a man who RECKLESSLY drives an automobile or who drives it UNDER THE INFLUENCE OF LIQUOR. The statute does not permit the imposition of more than a $200 fine. Apparently, it was the intent of the Legislature to PUNISH an offender with IMPRISONMENT if the character of his offense warranted a punishment greater than a fine of $200.

So small a fine is scarcely any punishment to a man of sufficient means to own and operate a car.

If the Legislature had intended to punish the severe cases with a fine, it would have provided for the imposition of a fine much more severe than $200. It seems clear that the Legislature INTENDED TO PUNISH THE WORST OFFENDERS with a jail sentence.

Nothing will stop the CONTINUED VIOLATION of law and the killing of men by these automobiles until the courts begin to put the GUILTY PARTIES IN JAIL. But if the authority which has been conferred upon the District Court in Cambridge to protect society in these cases has been conferred to no purpose, then the AMERICAN invites District Attorney Higgins of Middlesex County to give his ESPECIAL ATTENTION to this situation.

Mr. Higgins operates an automobile himself and knows that it is a PERFECTLY SAFE MACHINE in the hands of an intelligent and law abiding citizen. If the lower courts in his district will not wake up to a sense of the gravity of the situation, he ought to take matters into his OWN HANDS.

This condition prevails in many other district courts and, as the AMERICAN pointed out last week, the public prosecuting officers of those districts OUGHT to give the PUBLIC the PROTECTION which those courts are now failing to give.

"Mothers' Day" Ought to Be ELECTION DAY

A White Flower in the Buttonhole on "Mothers' Day" Won't Do Half as Much Good as a White Ballot in Mother's Hand on Election Day

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

Somebody invented "Mother's Day"—with the idea that about once a year somebody ought to remember mother—and do something to prove it.

When the average family starts out to celebrate "Mother's Day" it usually begins by instructing mother to have a good dinner ready for the celebration. And when the day is over, by the time mother has finished getting the dinner ready, and then finished getting rid of the things, mother is thoroughly worn out and wishes "Mother's Day" had never been heard of.

Very appropriately, in the House of Representatives in Washington, an individual named Heflin—who will feel extremely foolish and very much ashamed of himself some day—made a resolution in regard to "Mother's Day."

Mr. Heflin, if you please, is the leader of those in Congress that oppose GIVING VOTES TO WOMEN. Mr. Heflin, who represents about the most stupid and backward idea of the day, introduced a tearful little resolution, saying:

"That as a token of our love and reverence for the mother, the President and his Cabinet, United States Senators and Representatives of the House and all officials of the Federal Government are hereby requested to wear a white carnation or some other white flower Sunday, May 11, in observance of 'Mother's Day.'"

The resolution was passed unanimously, and so the President and the Cabinet, and the other gentlemen are asked to wear a little white flower once a year—AND THAT WONDERFUL AND EXTRAORDINARY THING IS DONE FOR MOTHER.

It reminds you of the old days when they gave the slaves one day to enjoy themselves and forget that they were slaves.

We tell Mr. Heflin, and the others who share his notion that women shouldn't vote, he should be the last to pose as one inclined TO HONOR the mothers of the country

The man who thinks mothers UNFIT TO VOTE is a pretty poor sample of a man, and the least he could do would be to let the MOTHER question alone.

Mr. Heflin probably means well when he opposes votes for women. Men who know very little often do mean well.

It isn't a white flower in the buttonhole that mother needs.

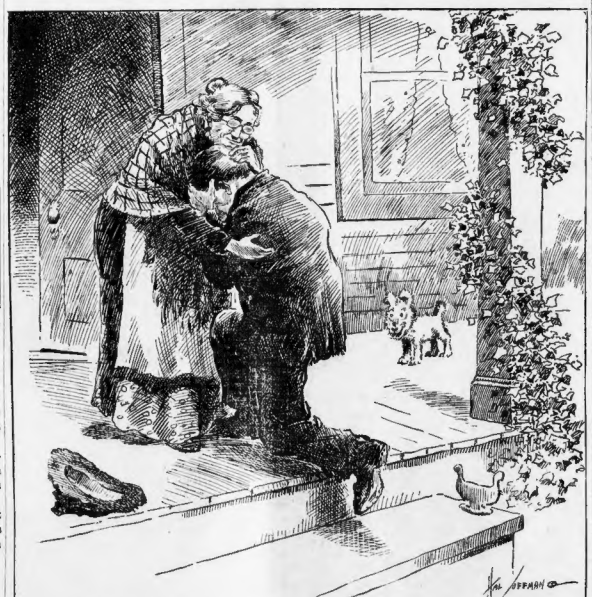
What mothe. wants is rest, protection for her daughters, less taxation on her breakfast table, dinner table, coal, ice, etc., by Trusts—and in shor' a chance to tell those who make the laws what mother NEEDS, and the power to punish with the ballot those like Mr. Heflin, who think that mother can get along very nicely if you give her a white flower once a year, and plenty of cooking, washing, ironing, scrubbing and baby tending to do the rest of the year.

Did the Lord ever make in all of his mysterious wisdom anything more foolish than the man who opposes votes for women, the man who calmly says that mothers are not fit to vote, and then gets up and says that as a little proof of respect for mothers we must wear a white flower once a year?

There is nothing more comical than that in recent legislation, is there?

The Speed Maniac

His Mother: The Failure Comes Home



Youth smiles as it steps from the homestead
To plunge in the battle of life,
For Youth has not seen the wounded
Who slink from the bitter strife.
Life seems a chivalrous combat,
Where all who strive must succeed,
For Youth has no thought of baseness,
Of treachery, craft nor greed.

But out in a world that's a battle
Success cannot come to all;
Where so many millions are struggling,
Some of the millions must fall.
And no place has the world for a failure;
He's alone in the crowded town;
And thousands of feet will trample
Over the man who's down.

No place in the world for a failure?
No heart that will bleed for his fall?
Thank heavens, the failure's mother
Seems to love him the best of all.
What if he has been a failure,
The love and the faith in her heart
Will send him anew to the battle
Equipped for a conqueror's part.

Qualities That Popularize Men with Women and Women with Men—Love of Hearing Self Analyzed and Made Leading Topic of Conversation the Answer

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1913, by American-Journal-Examiner.

JUST what are the qualities which make men popular with women and women with men?

Some of the ugliest men physically have been great Lotharios; and women without marked beauty have been heart winners.

Men with no decided talents; men of no social prowess; men without money; men with shadowy records, have all succeeded with women where other and seemingly more attractive and certainly more desirable men have failed.

A bigamist who was under engagement of marriage to thirty girls, when he married two of them, says his success resulted from "always talking to women about themselves."

That is the secret of most friendships and all love affairs, and the explanation of most divorces lies in the fact that the man or woman ceases to talk about the virtues and charms of the other.

Why Plain Women Often Fascinate and Hold Men.

That is why beautiful women seldom make men happy, and why plain women frequently fascinate and hold.

It is not a peculiarly feminine trait, this love of hearing oneself analyzed and made the leading topic of discussion—it is merely HUMAN.

Men claim to be above it, but in truth they are delighted to be the absorbing subject of conversation when a woman is the converser. Any girl, however devoid of physical charm, if she possesses refinement and tact, can win the man she admires if she understands the art of keeping him entertained about himself and gives him to understand in a subtle manner that his characteristics, his aims, his desires and interests are matters of continual observation and study to her. The woman who undertakes such a course of action must be modest, however, and in no way thrust herself upon the man's notice. She must not be bold or self-assertive, for these are repulsive qualities to a man.

She must simply utilize her opportunities and be patient. A man, on the contrary, can make his opportunities to see a woman, and when he uses boldness and self-assertion in his suit she is all the better pleased, so long as he continues to occupy her time by talking about her, with only occasional references to himself and other people.

A Trifling Man Might Gain Thirty Fiancees With Ease.

Therefore it is not difficult to understand how, while an earnest woman might be slow in succeeding in her wish to win and hold the regard of one man, a busy, trifling man might accumulate thirty fiancees with ease and celerity.

Yet, on the other hand, woman has more latitude than man for conversation of this kind. A man is perfectly willing a woman should discuss his faults, and delights in having her analyze his sins and weakneses (before marriage), with occasional laudations of his virtues; while a woman limits him to the recounting of her charming qualities and to anxious solicitude for her welfare.

The only fault she allows him to refer to is her ability to break hearts, or her cruelty to men who adore her, or her delicate physical organization. Most lovers talk of the charms of their sweethearts during courtship. Few husbands make the virtues of their wives a topic of conversation in the family circle—hence the divorce court is busy.

Few lovers are so tactless as to devote many minutes to lauding the virtues or charms of other women to their sweethearts.

Many Men Accuse Wives of Jealousy if They Seem Uninterested.

But, many husbands enjoy this topic of conversation, and accuse their wives of jealousy if they seem uninterested.

The successful bigamist surely would know better than to pursue such a course; so while better men have been losing their wives and sweethearts he has been winning an embarrassment of riches.
